Senate Sends Measure to Assembly Affecting Normal Schools

Albany, N. Y., May 16 (AP)—New York's Legislature, driving for adjournment Thursday, today completed approval of the Republican majority's revenue tax program with Senate passage of a proposed "penny for ten" impost on cigarettes.

The measure, previously passed in the Assembly, was endorsed by a party vote and sent to Governor Lehman along with measures continuing the state's milk advertising campaign and extending health services to parochial school students.

Favorable Assembly votes completed approval of the bill, while strike that split Republican majority lawmakers blocked temporarily action on two controversial proposals—a sales tax to finance local relief and a legislative investigation of alleged political corruption in Democratic Albany county.

Major Item in Program

The cigarette levy, designed to yield $22,500,000 to help finance the reduced state budget, is the major item in the tax program proposed by Republicans who cut $30,000,000 from Democratic Governor Lehman's $415,000,000 spending program.

Continuation for another year of state milk publicity, featuring newspaper advertising of the "dried more milk" campaign, was voted in the Assembly, 128 to 14.

The Assembly passed unanimously a Senate-approved proposal which, implementing the new constitution, would extend to parochial school students the same state health and welfare services granted to public school pupils.

A minor controversy developed in the Senate with Democratic criticism of a projected low-cost housing program, after agreement by legislative leaders and Democratic Governor Lehman on four major amendments.

A final Assembly vote to determine whether a popular referendum shall be held in November on the question of legalizing pari-mutuel betting was deferred at the request of an opponent.

The Assembly, in line with the majority Republican "economy" budget, voted 90 to 44 for a year's suspension of the law authorizing establishment of central rural school and central high school districts.

The measure went to the Senate with another bill which would prohibit advertising of offers of advice from other states or nations relating to divorce, separation, or annulment of marriage.

The Assembly last night approved and referred to the Senate the proposed "penny for ten" stamp tax on cigarettes, last major item in the Republicans' budget-revenue program.

Transmitted to the Assembly after favorable Senate action was a bill permitting the state's nine normal schools to add one year to their teacher training courses and award degrees comparable to those now granted by universities.

State Dairy Interests Join Other Groups Protesting Wage-Hour Change

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Representatives of New York State's $2,000,000 dairy industry have joined with other farm groups in protesting changes in the wage-hour act proposed in a bill by Chairman Norton (D-N. J.) of the House Labor Committee.

Farm opposition became so strong Mrs. Norton declined to call up the bill, which was scheduled to be brought before the House yesterday under an unusual procedure requiring suspension of the rules.

The week-end members of the New York congressional delegation received telegrams from Fred H. Sexauer, president of the Dairyman's League Cooperative Association, Inc., largest cooperative in the state, urging opposition to the Norton amendments.

Amato Defendant In Court Action For Death Claim

H. Weisman Also Named in Case to Recover for Death of Local Man in Strand Tavern

An action against Charles Amato and Harry Weisman brought to recover for the death of Charles I. Rhenstrom, who died at the tavern at 25 East Strand last December 28, was taken up in supreme court this morning.

Mrs. Marie Burhans of 1 North street brings an action as administratrix, claiming her son's death was caused by an act of Amato, who was employed as a bartender at the Strand Tavern that night.

Rhenstrom, a WPA worker died in the tavern following an alleged assault by Amato. Weisman, proprietor of the place, was not in his place of business at the time. Chris J. Flanagan appears for Mrs. Burhans and Charles Amato is represented by A. J. Cook while Weisman appears by Robert G. Groves.

Mrs. Burhans' Claim
Mrs. Burhans claims that her son, who contributed toward her support, died as a result of a blow or blows struck by Amato and seeks to recover money damages.

On the stand she testified he had been employed on a tanker for a time and gave her various sums of money but that after being unemployed for a time he secured work on the WPA and each two weeks gave her $20 of his $26.40 wage.

The death of Rhenstrom took place at the Strand tavern about 9 o'clock on the evening of December 28, last, when he and a couple of companions were at the place. It is claimed that Rhenstrom came to the tavern under influence of liquor and after being served with a beer was refused further alcoholic beverages and became abusive to the bartender, and as a result there was an attempt made to get Rhenstrom out of the place.

It is charged that in the attempt a battle ensued in which Rhenstrom was injured about the face and head and died of a hemorrhage. It is charged by the plaintiff that Rhenstrom was injured by several blows struck by the bartender in his efforts to eject Rhenstrom from the place after there had been an argument.

Defense Assertion
The defense claims that Rhenstrom came to the place intoxicated and refused to leave and that he became abusive and attempted to attack Amato. In opening the case the defense counsel stated that it would be shown that Rhenstrom had been drinking all day and had been sent home from the WPA job where he worked about noon because of his condition.

Anato, it is claimed, was attacked by Rhenstrom, who reached across the bar and attempted to assault Amato when he refused to serve drinks. The defense claims that Amato struck back and that after striking Rhenstrom.

Officials Must Telescope Parts of Tour to Make Up for Two-Day Delay Due to Fog, Ice

(By FRANK H. KING)

Quebec, May 16 (AP)—The liner Empress of Australia, bearing King George VI and his Scottish Queen on a historic visit to Canada and the United States, today neared a rendezvous with the St. Lawrence river pilot boat which will steer her into port at Quebec tonight.

While Pilot Auguste Santerre, veteran of the St. Lawrence, waited at Father Point for the Empress of Australia, harried officials in Quebec tackled a multitude of last minute problems to insure smooth execution of arrangements from the moment the King and Queen step ashore tomorrow morning.

The officials were hampered by the necessity of telescoping parts of the Canadian tour to make up for a two-day delay forced on the Empress of Australia by fog and ice. Arrangements for their majesties to spend June 8-11, inclusive, in the United States stood unaltered.

Other official headaches, some cured and some still under treatment, were to be classified roughly as follows:

Political problems involving sectionalism and alleged "homing in" on the royal program.

The complaints and representations of persons who had hoped for more intimate acquaintance with their sovereigns than official functions would permit.

The Dionne quintuplets—whether they would go to the King and Queen at Toronto or have the King and Queen go to them at Callander. It was decided the quintuplets would go to Toronto.

A decision to eliminate the 10-minute stops at Cornwall and Brockville to allow the royal visitors more rest after extended Ottawa ceremonies aroused such a protest that no further effort was made.

Polish Press Complains of Expulsion of Nationals From Frontier

(By The Associated Press)

France tried today to find a compromise which would bring Soviet Russia into the French-British front while Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini inspected German and Italian fortifications along the French frontier.

French diplomats hoped to bridge the conflicting views of Britain and Russia by working out a plan for a strong alliance which would be acceptable to all three nations.

Russia's stand for reciprocal military pledges among the three powers was regarded as elastic enough to permit a compromise with the British, who feared a hard-and-fast alliance might force Japan and Spain into still closer ties with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Diplomats of Britain, France and Russia will have an opportunity for face-to-face negotiations at Geneva next Monday, when the League Council meets, but in London it was indicated Britain might not wait until then for her next move.

At the foreign office it was said that the British answer to Soviet Russia's latest note on the projected alliance might be sent before the end of this week.

Mussolini toured his Piedmont frontier with France, making signs at Susa and Bardonecchia close to the border. His tour of defense works coincides with Chancellor Hitler's inspection of Germany's new western fortifications, for which German military experts claimed "invincibility."

New Symptoms of Friction

New symptoms of German-Polish friction appeared in the Polish press which complained of additional expulsion of Poles from the German frontier zone. Hungarian-Polish relations, on the contrary, were described by the pro-government newspaper Kurjer Poranny as friendly despite "German efforts to interfere" with them.

Britain, meanwhile, looked for final settlement of the troublesome Palestine question through a plan which the government is expected tomorrow. The plan was said to provide for the slow creation of a Palestine state which would be 60 per cent Arab and 40 per cent Jewish.

Through establishment of such a state, under which 75,000 more Jews would be permitted to enter Palestine in five years, the British hoped to end inter-racial fighting which has forced them to station an army in the Holy Land.

Committee Favors Ban on Raw Milk

Board of Health to Consider Report of Milk Group at June Meet

If the Board of Health accepts the report of its milk committee at its June meeting, Kingston will be the second city in the state requiring all milk sold here to be pasteurized.

The milk committee held a meeting recently to discuss milk in Kingston, and at that time decided to introduce a resolution at the board meeting next month banning the sale of raw milk in the city.

The question of banning all milk but pasteurized, came up at a meeting of the board held earlier in the year, and at that time it was referred to the milk committee to consider.

At the present time the only raw milk sold in the city is certified. Approximately 200 quarts of certified milk are sold daily in the city, and all other milk sold is pasteurized.

A verdict of accidental death was rendered by an Albany county coroner in the case of Barber. Mr. Short was not held by the authorities.

Senate Bloc Plans To Write Business Program of Taxes

Action Will Be Taken Unless President Orders Entire Revision of Present Schedules of Levies

Washington, May 16 (AP)—A powerful Senate bloc, led by Chairman Harrison (D., Miss.) of the finance committee, expressed determination today to write a new business tax program of its own unless President Roosevelt orders thorough revision of present levies.

Harrison, it was learned, told the President of this intention at a White House conference last night.

The administration's final attitude, however, probably will not be made known until legislative leaders hold further meetings with Mr. Roosevelt.

Harrison and his associates contend that repeal of the undistributed profits tax, creation of a flat corporation tax of about 18 per cent, more liberal allowances for corporation losses, and continued favored treatment for small firms are necessary to stimulate business improvement.

Resembles Earlier Program
This program closely resembles one formulated some time ago by treasury experts and understood to have Morgenthau's support.

The treasury plan provides for repeal of the undistributed profits and capital stock taxes and enactment of a flat corporation levy of 22 per cent. Harrison would not repeal the capital stock tax.

Both these plans were discussed at yesterday's conference, but since both call for repeal of at least one tax previously enacted on his recommitment, it was understood that Mr. Roosevelt while making no commitment, was loath to express approval of either one.

The President indicated to reporters last week that the whole question of tax revision was up to congress and that the administration would make no recommendations, Morgenthau and Hanes, however, have indicated they strongly favored revision.

Some senators believe that unless Mr. Roosevelt gives the signal for changes, the House will confine its action on business levies to passing a simple resolution extending the present corporation tax schedule which expires December 31.

Leaders of the revision bloc said that if this occurred, they could marshal sufficient Senate votes to write a new schedule along Harrison's lines. Business sentiment, they declared, would force the House and the administration to accept it.

Fractured Skull

Youth Sustains Fatal Head Injury—Driver Gives His Version

Ronald Dugan, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Dugan, of 485 Wilbur avenue, was fatally injured when struck by an automobile driven by Chief Helmer J. Jansane, 47, of 1650 East avenue, Rochester, about 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon in front of 110 Wall street. The boy died at 3:48 o'clock this morning in the Kingston Hospital.

Coroner Howard B. Humiston of Kerhonkson, after examining the written statements made by eye witnesses of the tragedy, handed down a verdict of accidental death.

An autopsy made on the boy by Dr. J. S. Taylor and Dr. Frederick Snyder showed that death was caused by a fracture of the skull.

Ran Across Street
The boy, who was a pupil in St. Joseph's School, with three other boys, Louis Whalen, Richard Deyo and his brother, Gerald, aged 9 years, were on their way home from school and, according to statements made by the boys to the police, Ronald pushed one of the boys into a rose bush and then started to run across the street.

As the boy ran out into the street he was struck by the automobile driven by Mr. Jansane, who informed the police that he was driving between 20 and 25 miles an hour and did not see the boy run out into the street until he was almost in front of the car.

Boy Under Front of Car
Mr. Jansane said he immediately applied his brakes and "stopped car at the point of impact." Getting out of the car he found the boy lying under the front of the machine Mr. Jansane said that the car did not run over the boy.

The boy, who was unconscious, was rushed to the Kingston Hospital in the Conner's ambulance and was attended by Dr. Snyder. The police department made a thorough investigation and took statements of the three other boys, Mr. Jansane and Mrs. Jansane, who was riding with her husband, and others who saw the accident.

Salesman Not Held
After checking the statements the police did not hold Mr. Jansane, who is employed as a salesman by a button concern in Rochester.

Young Dugan was one of the star athletes of Barmans Park and last year in the city recreation's athletic program between the city parks made a fine record in various athletic events. He was the oldest of five children.

The funeral will be held from the family home, 485 Wilbur avenue, Friday morning at 9:30 and at St. Joseph's Church at 10 o'clock with a high Mass of requiem for the repose of his soul. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Operators Say Shows to Remain Shut Until Conditions Are Made Better

New York, May 16 (AP)—Six shows in the World's Fair amusement zone were shut down today amid bitter criticism of the fair corporation for alleged "stepchild treatment" and poor working conditions.

A spokesman for DuFour and Rogers, operators of the six exhibits, said the shows would remain closed until conditions were remedied.

He criticized insurance rates, the lighting system in the amusement loop, roadways, sanitation, and the "annoyance" of constant supervision and inspection.

The darkened attractions were "Strange As It Seems," a collection of human oddities; "Seminole Village," showing Indians from the Florida Everglades; "Gang Busters," a dramatization of war on crime; "Nature's Mistakes," a display of animal freaks; "Silver Streak," a ride; and "We Humans," a study of ancient man.

On the stand she testified he had been employed on a tanker for a time and gave her various sums of money but that after being employed for a time he secured work on the WPA and each two weeks gave her $20 of his $35.40 wage.

It is claimed that Rhenstrom came to the tavern under influence of liquor and after being served with a beer was refused further alcoholic beverages and became abusive to the bartender, and as a result there was an attempt made to get Rhenstrom out of the place.

Governor Chandler Says Guardsmen Are Portion of Harlan Patrol; One Officer Relieved

Barren, Ky., May 16 (AP)—National guard troop protection for coal miners wishing to work has been extended into Bell county.

Governor A. B. Chandler at Frankfort, revealed today that some militiamen are stationed at a corner of Bell county but are a part of the unit on duty in Harlan county.

A national guard officer was relieved of his command today for failure to "show the proper aggressiveness" as 15 anti-union miners, 10 in all, opened to the disturbed Harlan soft coal field today under the protective guns of state troops.

Brigadier General Elmer Carter, in announcing the officer's removal, refused to give his name but said he had been sent home and his machine gun troop, on duty yesterday at the town trouble zone, broken up and distributed among other units.

Car Is Attacked

It was told that C. V. Bennett, general manager of the Harlan Central Coal Company, reported an automobile filled with miners returning from work was attacked by pickets and stones hurled through the windshield but none was hurt. Bennett also reported 150 to 200 pickets were "threatening." Several units of troops were rushed to the spot and spent the night.

There were reports that troops would be sent into neighboring Bell county, where both the sheriff and circuit judge were reported to have refused to call for them. The order must be issued by Governor A. B. Chandler, who has said that he would send troops where requested by the proper authorities.

There was no indication this morning when peace conferences started yesterday, would be resumed by William Turnbull, president of the Harlan United Mine Workers district, before going on a tour of the mines, said that he expected to sign the Black Mountain Coal Corporation to a union shop contract late today.

Operators of Kentucky's hazard district prepared to chart their future course at a meeting today in Lexington and mine owners and union men of the big Sandy Elkhorn district considered resuming their conversations at Ashland.

Th three Kentucky-district operators declined to join 15 other soft coal districts in approving new contracts at the New York conference Saturday.

Col. Roy W. Easley of the guardsmen here reported troops had been asked by 13 Harlan mines additional to the six he said operated under guard yesterday, when 203 more soldiers were ordered into this county by Gov. A. B. Chandler to aid the 357 already on patrol duty.

Meanwhile, a federal investigation of the Kentucky mobilization was suggested by John L. Lewis, chief of the Committee on Industrial Organizations and the U. M. W., in a speech last night at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 16 (AP)—The head of the nation's G-Man forces was told today that Philadelphia's insurance-murder racket is so vast that "no one can estimate the number of crimes committed to date or the ramifications of the heinous murderers."

Topping all previous calculations, this new definition of the ring's possible scope was given by Judge Harry S. McDewitt in a telegram urging J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, to come here and make a "personal survey of this unbelievable crime syndicate."

Judge McDewitt declared weeks ago at the trial of Herman Petrilov, convicted poisoner of a WPA worker, that "scores and scores" of persons had been murdered by the ring in eastern states. More recently, with 24 persons in custody, authorities said there were 30 known dead and that the ultimate total might exceed 100.

While the FBI has said it has not entered the case actively, Hoover has promised "immediate consideration" of any request Philadelphia authorities might make for aid.

Officer Joseph Fallon, who was off duty and on Wall street that afternoon saw Morrison come out of the store in a hurry and his coat looked as though it had a number of articles stuffed under it.

Committee Favors Ban on Raw Milk

Board of Health to Consider Report of Milk Group at June Meet

If the Board of Health accepts the report of its milk committee at its June meeting, Kingston will be the second city in the state requiring all milk sold here to be pasteurized.

The milk committee held a meeting recently to discuss milk in Kingston, and at that time decided to introduce a resolution at the board meeting next month banning the sale of raw milk in the city.

The question of banning all milk but pasteurized, came up at a meeting of the board held earlier in the year, and at that time it was referred to the milk committee to consider.

At the present time the only raw milk sold in the city is certified. Approximately 200 quarts of certified milk are sold daily in the city, and all other milk sold is pasteurized.

Passenger Vehicle Crashes Into Rear of Tractor Trailer Early Today Near Ravenna

Charles Barber, 35, of 434 Third street, Albany, was killed, and Donald Kilts, 21, of 488 Clinton avenue, Albany, suffered a broken leg and arm, when their 1937 Ford coach crashed into the rear of a tractor trailer driven by Edward L. Short of Wittenberg, near the top of French Hill near Ravenna at 4:50 o'clock this morning.

Kilts was removed to the Albany Hospital for treatment. According to the state police Kilts was driving the automobile while Barber was riding with him.

Both the Ford coach and the tractor trailer were proceeding on Route 9-W on the way toward Albany when the automobile crashed into the rear of the trailer.

A verdict of accidental death was rendered by an Albany county coroner in the case of Barber. Mr. Short was not held by the authorities.

Senate Bloc Plans To Write Business Program of Taxes

Action Will Be Taken Unless President Orders Entire Revision of Present Schedules of Levies

Washington, May 16 (AP)—A powerful Senate bloc, led by Chairman Harrison (D., Mass.) of the finance committee, expressed determination today to write a new business tax program of its own unless President Roosevelt orders thorough revision of present levies.

Harrison, it was learned, told the President of this intention at a White House conference last night.

The administration's final attitude, however, probably will not be made known until legislative leaders hold further meetings with Mr. Roosevelt.

Harrison and his associates contend that repeal of the undistributed profits tax, creation of a flat corporation tax of about 18 per cent, more liberal allowances for corporation losses, and continued favored treatment for small firms are necessary to stimulate business improvement.

Resembles Earlier Program

This program closely resembles one formulated some time ago by treasury experts and understood to have Morgenthau's support. The treasury plan provides for repeal of the undistributed profits and capital stock taxes and enactment of a flat corporation levy of 22 per cent. Harrison would not repeal the capital stock tax.

Both these plans were discussed at yesterday's conference, but since both call for repeal of at least one tax previously enacted on his recommendation, it was understood that Mr. Roosevelt would make no commitment, was loath to express approval of either one.

The President indicated to reporters last week that the whole question of tax revision was up to congress and that the administration would make no recommendations. Morgenthau and Hanes, however, have indicated they strongly favored revision.

Some senators believe that unless Mr. Roosevelt gives the signal for change, the House will confine its action on business levies to passing a simple resolution extending the present corporation tax schedule which expires December 31.

Leaders of the revision bloc said that if this occurred, they could marshal sufficient Senate votes to write a new schedule along Harrison's lines. Business sentiment, they declared, would force the House and the administration to accept it.

Six Shows Close

Operators Say Shows to Remain Shut Until Conditions Are Made Better

New York, May 16 (AP)—Six shows in the World's Fair amusement zone were shut down today amid bitter criticism of the fair corporation for alleged "stepchild treatment" and poor working conditions.

A spokesman for DuFour and Rogers, operators of the six exhibits, said the shows would remain closed until conditions were remedied.

He criticized insurance rates, the lighting system in the amusement zone, the lack of sanitation, and the "annoyance" of constant supervision and inspection.

The darkened attractions were "Strange As It Seems," a collection of human oddities; "Seminole Village," showing Indians from the Florida Everglades; "Gang Busters," a dramatization of war on crime; "Nature's Mistakes," a display of animal freaks; the "Silver Struck," a ride; and "We Humans," a study of ancient man.

State Dairy Interests Join Other Groups Protesting Wage-Hour Change

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Representatives of New York State's $2,000,000,000 dairy industry have joined with other farm groups in protesting changes in the wage-hour act proposed in a bill by Chairman Norton (D-N. J.) of the House Labor Committee.

Farm opposition became so strong Mrs. Norton declined to call up the bill, which was scheduled to be brought before the House yesterday under an unusual procedure requiring suspension of the rules.

During the week-end members of the New York congressional delegation received a telegram from Fred H. Saxeau, president of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., largest cooperative in the state, urging opposition to the Norton amendments.

$8,000,000 Boost In Auto Sales to Argentine Market

An increase of $8,000,000 in sales of American automobiles this year will be the result of doubling the Argentine import quota, announced today by the U. S. State Department. The bulk of the business will probably be given to General Motors and Ford which sell about 80 per cent of American cars going to the Argentine market. The Argentine government will finance the purchases through one, two and three year dollar notes bearing 2½ per cent interest. At the beginning of the year it was announced that Argentina would import American cars and trucks to but 35 per cent of the 1938 quota, which totaled 36,853, but the recent move will be that they will take about 70 per cent of last year's imports.

It is believed that early stabilization of steel prices at the levels set by Carnegie-Illinois announcement is likely in Detroit. Steel operations this week started at 43.4 per cent of capacity, up 1.6 points from previous week. It is the seventh consecutive decline and the rate is lowest for a full week since early last September. There will be no wheat marketing quota this year, according to Secretary Wallace, who established the 1940 wheat acreage allotment at 62,000,000 acres. The secretary estimated that the total supply on hand July 1 would be 974,000,000 bushels, which would be 47,000,000 bushels below the level which would make a quota referendum necessary. The 1940 allotment is 7,000,000 acres over the present year, but about 3,500,000 acres below the seeded acreage this year.

Du Pont declared an interim dividend of $1.25 on common for the second quarter. Paid 50 cents a year ago.

The stock market continued its drop yesterday, with 330,000 shares dealt in. Dow-Jones averages for all classes of securities showed the opening above Saturday's close, but little interest was shown and the close was irregularly lower. Industrials finished up 0.25 point for the day, to 132.65, but rails and utilities were off, the former losing 0.08 point, to 27.24 and utilities being down 0.06 point, to 12.17.

Commodity prices eased off yesterday, the Dow-Jones index showing a loss of 0.31 point from Saturday. Cotton closed off one to 13 points. Wheat had a firm start, but turned downward, Chicago showing a loss of ¼ to 1½ cents a bushel. Butter sold at Chicago for 22½ cents a pound, 92 score and a car of 90 score sold at 21½ cents. Hides were lower.

London market was firm in quiet trading, industrial and rail averages being up. Amsterdam was quiet with price changes small.

President McGraw of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. says that present volume of their business is slightly ahead of last year.

Christiana Securities, originally known as du Pont Securities, and which owns large blocks of General Motors and du Pont stocks, declared a dividend at 23.50 on common; paid the same on March 13.

Technicolor had earnings for the first quarter of around $310,500 after estimated taxes, etc., compared with net of $360,889 in the first quarter of last year.

Purchase by the Navy of Argentine canned beef has brought the charge that the President is attempting to advance his good neighbor policy at the expense of the American farmer. His defense of the purchases was attacked in both houses of Congress yesterday.

Mountain Lion Kills Deer

Oakland, Calif., May 16 (AP)—Almost in the shadow of St. Mary's College campus, a mountain lion stalked and killed a deer. Ernest Pimental, rancher, said he saw the lion leap on a young spotted buck, breaking its back. The lion disappeared when it saw the rancher. Tracks of the lion measured five inches across.

New York, May 16 (AP)—Selling became a little more persistent in today's stock market and leading issues were pushed back fractions to around 2 points.

Prices, steady at the start, wavered before noon on larger volume than has been customary in the past week or so. There were subsequent slow periods, with transfers for the five hours at the rate of approximately 700,000 shares. Low marks of the day were recorded near the final hour.

Brokers could find nothing particular in the news to unsettle sentiment and attributed at least part of the set-back to tried holders who apparently decided to reduce commitments in view of recent apathetic market performances.

U. S. government bonds were again firm, but corporate loans were somewhat shaky. Commodities were uneven.

Amato Defendant In Court Today

strom in front of the bar Amato went back behind the bar and then Rhenstrom dropped to the floor and died before medical attention could be given. Amato claims he exercised just enough force to get Rhenstrom out of the place and denies he used undue force.

Amato claims he used his fist in the affair and it is intimated that Rhenstrom died as a result of hemorrhage which he suffered when he fell to the floor.

Deputy Sheriff Arthur H. Brown identified photographs made at the place and Mrs. Burhans was called and testified her son was 35 years old and she said that he "drank pretty steadily," but that he worked steadily and contributed to her support.

Doctor Testifies

Dr. Chester B. Van Gaasbeek gave the cause of death as hemorrhage near the base of the brain which caused pressure on the brain. He said the man was dead when he arrived at about 9:20 o'clock. When he reached the place the man was on the floor and two police officers were there as well as Amato and two or three others. All of the injuries were about the face and head. There was no injury apparent over the spot where the hemorrhage seemed most.

The physician said that Rhenstrom had been injured about the chin, left eye, nose and there were a couple of small cuts on the forehead. There was no fracture of skull which he described as unusually thin, "almost like paper." In his opinion the hemorrhage was caused by a blow or injury and, he said, although no spot could be located where a large blood vessel had been broken, death was due to the pressure of the hemorrhage.

It had been impossible to tell just where the blood came from since no large blood vessel was broken. There was no injury to the rear of the head.

Definitely Intoxicated

Rhenstrom was definitely intoxicated, he said. This was ascertained by an examination of blood taken from the heart. This test showed that there was alcohol present in the blood to the volume of twice that which is accepted as the standard after which a person is deemed not in condition to operate an automobile. The alcohol content was 24 per cent in the blood and 11 per cent is considered sufficient to make a person unable to operate a car.

Dr. J. S. Taylor, who performed the autopsy gave practically the same testimony and said that death was due to pressure of blood on the brain and that all the injuries seemed to be about the face. Rhenstrom was intoxicated at the time he said. In his opinion the injury could have been caused by a blow or injury in the region where the marks were on the face of Rhenstrom, this, he said, was only his opinion.

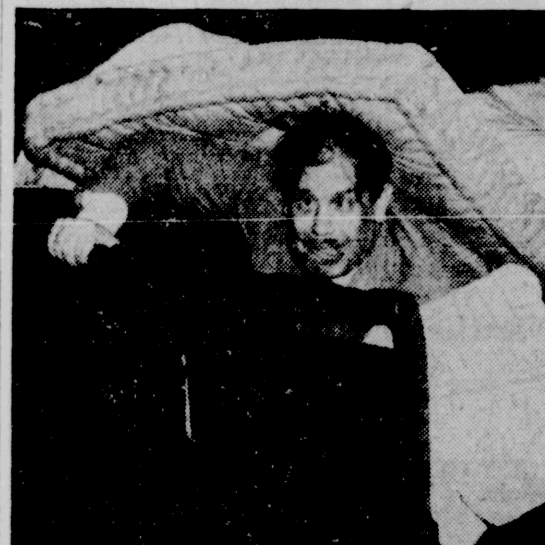

Officer Howard Kinch was the last witness at the morning session. He with Officer Keresman went to the scene in the radio car at 8:56 o'clock and found Rhenstrom in a chair in the tavern, apparently badly injured. They placed him on the floor and called a doctor.

At the time Amato told the officers he had struck Rhenstrom after Rhenstrom made a pass at him over the bar. Amato said he struck Rhenstrom once and then came around in front of the bar and struck Rhenstrom five or six times. At that time Amato never told the officers that Rhenstrom had ever struck Amato. He said when the officers arrived they found Amato, Sidney Kantowitz

St. Peter's Men Hosts to Baptists

St. Peter's Holy Name Society turned out with over 180 members Monday evening to entertain the Rev. Clarence E. Brown and 18 members of the Men's Club of the Wurts Street Baptist Church at the monthly meeting of the society.

In the absence of President George P. Reis, Vice President Leo Schupp assumed the gavel in a business session which emphasized progress in the various activities of the organization.

The Rev. Henry E. Herdegen, spiritual director, in his talk to the men commented upon the appointment of Archbishop Francis Spellman to the New York diocese and explained the method in which an incumbent for such high station is chosen.

The society passed a resolution instructing its secretary to forward to Archbishop Spellman its best wishes and congratulations upon his elevation in the Catholic hierarchy.

When the business session adjourned the Rev. Mr. Brown and the members of his Men's Club were shown into the school hall to take part in the program of entertainment.

Through the courtesy of O'Reilly's, the local stationers, a projector and sound equipment were provided and operated by Henry Milonig, showing a film entitled "Golf With the Masters." An animated cartoon was also shown.

Refreshments followed the movies and later the Rev. Mr. Brown and his companions were taken to the society's club rooms to indulge in the recreational facilities.

This is the last meeting until next September, during which month the society expects to hold a clambake.

Father Herdegen outlined a program of cultural as well as recreational activities which the society will inaugurate later in the year.

Beets and Sweets To Become Royal Fare at Capital

By BETH CAMPBELL

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Beets and sweet potatoes, which are served on thousands of American tables every summer, will become royal fare in June.

They are included on a tentative menu for the state dinner to be given King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, which follows:

Clam Cocktail
Calves' Head Soup
Broiled Fillet of Flounder
Mushroom and Wine Sauce
Sliced Tomatoes
Boned Capon
Cranberry Sauce
Peas
Sweet Potato Puffs
Frozen Cheese and Cress Salad
Maple and Almond Ice Cream
Coffee

Not a French Word

There's not a French word on the list and nothing that has to be imported. Dishes were suggested for Mrs. Roosevelt's approval after Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, the first lady's housekeeper, studied menus served to the king and queen at numerous functions.

These menus indicated to Mrs. Nesbitt that King George and Queen Elizabeth like rather simple food. That made it easy, because the Roosevelts like simple food, too.

Fare planned for the British rulers' private luncheon with Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt is as follows:

Minted Melon Balls
Jellied Bouillon
Broiled Sweetbreads with Mushrooms
Asparagus and Potato Chips
Hearts of Lettuce, Roquefort Dressing
Strawberry Shortcake
Coffee

Breakfast for Their Majesties will be upon their order, but dispatches from London indicate that the king likes the typically American orange juice, toast and coffee. His favorite nightcap is hot milk or cocoa.

$8,000,000 Boost In Auto Sales to Argentine Market

An increase of $8,000,000 in sales of American automobiles this year will be the result of doubling the Argentine import quota, announcement of which it is stated will be made in Buenos Aires within a few days. The bulk of the business will probably be given to General Motors and Ford which sell about 80 per cent of American cars going to the Argentine market. The Argentine government will finance the purchases through one two and three year notes bearing 2½ per cent interest. At the beginning of the year it was announced that Argentina would import American cars and trucks to total 35 per cent of the 1938 quota, which totaled 36,533, but the recent move will be that they will take about 70 per cent of last year's imports.

It is believed that early stabilization of steel prices at the levels set by Carnegie-Illinois announcement is likely in Detroit. Steel operations this week started at 45.4 per cent of capacity, off 1.6 points from previous week. It is the seventh consecutive decline and the rate is lowest for a full week since early last September. There will be no wheat marketing quota this year, according to Secretary Wallace, who established the 1940 wheat acreage allotment at 62,000,000 acres. The secretary estimated that the total supply on hand July 1 would be 974,000,000 bushels, which would be 47,000,000 bushels below the level which would make a quota referendum necessary. The 1940 allotment is 7,000,000 acres over the present year, but about 3,500,000 acres below the seeded acreage this year.

Du Pont declared an interim dividend of $1.25 on common for the second quarter. Paid 50 cents a year ago.

The stock market continued its drooping yesterday, with 330,000 shares dealt in. Dow-Jones averages for all classes of securities showed the opening above Saturday's close, but little interest was shown and the close was irregularly lower. Industrials finished up 0.25 point for the day, to 132.65, but rails and utilities were off, the former losing 0.08 point, to 27.24 and utilities being down 0.06 point, to 12.17.

Commodity prices eased off yesterday, the Dow-Jones index showing a loss of 0.31 point from Saturday. Cotton closed off one to 13 points. Wheat had a firm start but turned downward, Chicago showing a loss of 1½ to 1¾ cents a bushel. Butter sold at Chicago for 22½ cents a pound, 92 score and a car of 90 score sold at 21½ cents. Hides were lower.

London market was firm in quiet trading, industrial and rail averages being up. Amsterdam was quiet with price changes small.

President McGraw of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. says that present volume of their business is slightly ahead of last year.

Christiana Securities, originally known as du Pont Securities, and which owns large blocks of General Motors and du Pont stocks, declared a dividend at 23.50 on common; paid the same on March 15.

Technicolor had earnings for the first quarter of around $310,500, after estimated taxes, etc., compared with net of $360,889 in the first quarter of last year.

Purchase by the Mayor of Argentina canned beef has brought the charge that the President is attempting to advance his good neighbor policy at the expense of the American farmer. His defense of the purchases was attacked in both houses of Congress yesterday.

Mountain Lion Kills Deer

Oakland, Calif., May 16 (AP)—Almost in the shadow of St. Mary's College campus, a mountain lion stalked and killed a deer. Ernest Pimentel, rancher, said he saw the lion leap on a young spotted buck, breaking its back. The lion disappeared when it saw the rancher. Tracks of the lion measured five inches across.

New York, May 16 (AP)—Selling

became a little more persistent in today's stock market and leading issues were pushed back fractions to around 2 points.

Prices steady at the start, wavered before noon on larger volume than has been customary in the past week or so. There were subsequent slow periods, with transfers for the five hours at the rate of approximately 700,000 shares. Low marks of the day were recorded near the final hour.

Brokers could find nothing particular in the news to unsettle sentiment and attributed at least part of the set-back to tried holders who apparently decided to reduce commitments in view of recent apathetic market performances.

U. S. government bonds were again firm, but corporate loans were somewhat shaky. Commodities were uneven.

Conspicuous stocks on the downside included Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, General Electric, du Pont, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Santa Fe and N. Y. Central.

Drifting lower in the curb were Aluminum of America, Electric Bond & Share, Lockheed and Standard Steel Spring.

Doctor Testifies

Dr. Chester B. Van Gaasbeek gave the cause of death as hemorrhage near the base of the brain which caused pressure on the brain. He said the man was dead when he arrived at about 9:20 o'clock. When he reached the place the man was on the floor and two police officers were there as well as Amato and two or three others. All of the injuries were about the face and head. There was no injury apparent over the spot where the hemorrhage seemed most.

The physician said that Rhenstrom had been injured about the chin, left eye, nose and there were a couple of small cuts on the forehead. There was no fracture of skull which he described as unusually thin, "almost like paper." In his opinion the hemorrhage was caused by a blow or injury and he said, although no spot could be located where a large blood vessel had been broken, death was due to the pressure of the hemorrhage. At the autopsy it had been impossible to tell just where the blood came from since no large blood vessel was broken. There was no injury to the rear of the head.

Definitely Intoxicated

Rhenstrom was definitely intoxicated, he said. This was ascertained by an examination of blood taken from the heart. This test showed that there was alcohol present in the blood to the volume of twice that which is accepted as the standard after which a person is deemed not in condition to operate an automobile. The alcohol content was 24 per cent in the blood and 11 per cent is considered sufficient to make a person unable to operate a car.

Dr. J. S. Taylor, who performed the autopsy gave practically the same testimony and said that death was due to pressure of blood on the brain and that all the injuries seemed to be about the face. Rhenstrom was intoxicated at the time he said. In his opinion the injury could have been caused by a blow or injury in the region where the marks were on the face of Rhenstrom, this, he said, was only his opinion.

Officer Howard Kinch was the last witness at the morning session. He with Officer Kerestman went to the scene in the radio car at 8:56 o'clock and found Rhenstrom in a chair in the tavern, apparently badly injured. They placed him on the floor and called a doctor.

At the time Amato told the officers he had struck Rhenstrom after Rhenstrom made a pass at him over the bar. Amato said he struck Rhenstrom once and then came around in front of the bar and struck Rhenstrom five or six times. At that time Amato never told the officers that Rhenstrom had ever struck Amato. He said when the officers arrived they found Amato, Sidney Kantrowitz strom in front of the bar Amato went back behind the bar and then Rhenstrom dropped to the floor and died before medical attention could be given. Amato claims he exercised just enough force to get Rhenstrom out of the place and denies he used undue force.

Amato claims he used his fist in the affair and it is intimated that Rhenstrom died as a result of hemorrhage which he suffered when he fell to the floor.

Deputy Sheriff Arthur H. Brown identified photographs made at the place and Mrs. Burhans was called and testified her son was 35 years old and she said that he "drank pretty steadily," but that he worked steadily and contributed to her support.

MEDICAL PROBLEMS

It begins to seem clear that, in one way or another, the American people are going to get the medical care which our medical profession—the best in the world—is able to give them. It is mostly a matter of spreading the doctors' knowledge and skill around where they are needed, instead of leaving it so much to chance.

Dr. E. C. Winslow, public health professor at Yale University School of Medicine, makes this bold statement: "What income groups are to be covered in group medical care programs, and how the doctors' fees are to be paid, are not questions to be solved by the medical profession." The doctor's job is to heal the sick, and giving him a chance and providing his pay is a job for economists and society in general.

He urges physicians to forget the economic aspects of medical service, and to concentrate on solving the two great medical problems—"how service is to be rendered to insured groups, whether by salaried physicians or through specified fees, and how the quality of the service is to be guaranteed."

It is remarkable how this attitude seems to be spreading, among physicians as well as the public.

MODERN CHIVALRY

Sure, chivalry still survives. You can see it occasionally even in street cars. And it assumes new forms. Here is a case observed the other day in a city where it's a long way down town.

It was the morning rush hour and the seats were all filled when an old lady entered. A man promptly rose and gave her his seat. Half-way down, the hero felt a touch on his arm and turned. Another man, in possession of a perfectly good seat, had risen and was motioning him to the vacant place. "It's only fair," the second hero said, as the first one protested. "You've stood up half the way; I'll take the other half."

Division of courtesy may be a novel idea, but it's perfectly logical. And there would be a whole lot more courtesy shown, in street cars and elsewhere, if men once got the idea of dividing the inconvenience or discomfort in a businesslike way.

MAIN STREET MOBILIZES

The stranger drifted into the office and looked around uncertainly, came and sat gently down on the edge of the editor's desk, and said: "I just came in to report on conditions at the front. That is, you understand, in our neighborhood. The situation's getting very complicated."

"It's been a pretty good neighborhood, you understand. People of several racial origins, but sort of old and settled. Little disputes breaking out now and then, and women making trouble sometimes about social prestige, and the men getting het up over politics or business conditions or garbage disposal, as they fussed around their backyards, but nothing serious."

"Then lately some of 'em began feeling sort of scared by things they heard about some of the other fellows. There seemed to be grudges developing, and little scraps breaking out. And Bill Jones, who's always been a pretty good egg, drops around where I'm smokin' on my back porch one evening, and says: 'Jim, I don't like the way these guys in back here are acting. There's Sam Andrews, who ain't naturally very sociable anyway—he scowled at me as I was coming past his house last night. And with him was Joe Muller. It looked like they were cookin' up something. I heard one of 'em mention your name. Honest, I don't feel safe. And maybe you're not.'"

"Now," says he, 'suppose you an' I make a sort of agreement, that if either of those bozos make a pass at either of us, we'll stand together against 'em.'"

"Well," continued the stranger, "I didn't like the idea. But I wanted to play safe. And finally I agreed to the defensive alliance, as Bill called it. And we felt safer for a few days."

But doggone it, word got around, and soon some of the other neighbors were saying it was an outrage, and we were not aiming at self-defense but fixing to beat up some innocent people. So a couple of fellows around the corner got mad and announced that if either of us tackled either of them, they'd both hop onto us.

"And then, gosh darn it, if the thing didn't start spreading like wildfire. All the neighbors began taking sides, and we had to get more allies. The other crowd began hollering that we were conspiring to upset their garbage cans and sprinkle salt on their lawns and put paris green in their milk. And we began issuing threats, and they came back with ultimatums, and there was no end of talk about invasion and aggression and encirclement and so on. And we were trying to steal their friends and they were corrupting our friends. And nobody really knows what it's about, and a good many of 'em are not even very clear which side they're on, but everybody's awful mad and scared. Now what would you do about it?"

And the editor just sat and looked at the visitor, and looked at his desk, and thought and thought and thought.

ALASKA HIGHWAY

There is some serious objection, in Canada, to the proposed Alaska Highway, running from the State of Washington up the coast through British Columbia to southern Alaska. It would go through Canadian territory for nearly a thousand miles.

The opposition seems to be based not on prejudice or principle, but on practical consideration. In case of war, Conservative statesmen at Ottawa say, the transport of American troops over that road might get Canada into trouble.

The route proposed would obviously make a useful military highway and help to protect Alaska from Asiatic aggression. But the Canadian objection is understandable. Any defense against an attack from Asia, in that quarter, might be as useful to Canada as to the United States; but if Canadians have any such fear as Ottawa debate indicates, the military use of the road need not be insisted on.

It would probably justify itself merely as a route for tourists and civilian transport. As such, it would be an important and picturesque link in the great All-American highway down the western side of North and South America, from the Arctic to the Antarctic.

The "man over 40" can usually keep a job if he has it, but can't get one if he hasn't. He needs a break before he's broke.

PREVENTING FLAT FEET

One of the worst cases of flat feet I have ever seen was that of a recruit who wished to go overseas during the war. The examining physician rejected him and he was referred to me as president of the medical board. His arches were all the way down on the floor. After having him walk around the armory floor, bare-footed, he knelt down and there was not a white spot on the whole sole of the foot. He informed me that he had walked nearly thirty miles to be examined and that he was one of the next day against the world's amateur champion. He was second to the world's champion in the race and claimed that he could walk ten times the distance without feeling any pain in his feet.

Why was this man with such flat feet able to walk without pain? Walking did not cause pain because the ligaments binding the bones of the foot together were not rigid nor had the tendons of the muscles become too hard. It is this lack of "rigidity" that enables a dancer with flat feet to still do the ballet. However, in most cases where the arch—crossways of the foot—is down on the floor, the foot is rigid and after taking a plaster cast of the foot, an arch support gives relief. It is usually too late to use exercise or other methods of treatment. It is, however, the beginning of early cases of flat feet that can and should be helped because exercise can lift up and hold the arch, making arch supports unnecessary.

Dr. Bryan Keon-Cohen, Melbourne, in The Medical Journal of Australia, says: "Raising and lengthening the heel of the shoe puts the weight of the body on the proper bone or bones, prevents the toes turning out, and supports the weakened structures on the inside of the heel and foot. All the patients' shoes must be similarly altered; no slippers or sandals are permitted, and in no circumstances whatever may weight bearing be allowed unless the proper footwear is worn."

The exercises most used to raise and hold up the arch are: (a) walking on the outside of the feet, (b) raising on toes and (c) trying to grasp an object—marble or other round object—with the toes.

Croesus' Mines Found
Turkey reports the discovery of the gold mines of Croesus, millionaire king of Lydia in the Sixth century B. C. The richest finds are at Sart, close under the ruins of Sardes, capital of the Lydian empire. Croesus is reputed to have gathered his fabulous wealth from the golden sands of the Pactolus, a stream which flows through Sardes and into the Hermus (Gediz) river. Under Croesus, Lydia grew from a small kingdom to a powerful empire ruling all Asia Minor. The Lydians were supposedly the first people to coin money and to establish a system of currency. Archeologists have found some of the electrum coins struck off in Croesus' mint. Electrum, a native alloy of gold and silver, was mined on the banks of the Pactolus.

Today in Washington

Monopoly Granted to United Mine Workers as Against Their Competitors, the Progressive Miners' Union
By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1939)
Washington, May 16.—Do the American people know what the coal strike was about, and were the issues clearly defined in authoritative manner by the parties at interest?

The answer to this question must be negative, because the term "union shop," around which the controversy was waged, is being used without quotation marks in most all press dispatches as if the public were really familiar with the term.

It might be supposed from such a reading that the coal operators refused to recognize unionism. As a matter of fact, the words "union shop" and "closed shop" are virtually synonymous as applied in the contract signed by some of the Appalachian area operators.

The National Labor Relations Act, popularly known as the Wagner law, compels employers to recognize whatever union has a majority of the employees in a given unit, which may be an industry or a particular plant. It would indeed be a violation of the law for a coal operator to refuse to recognize for collective bargaining the union employees who have a majority. So any impression that the coal operators declined to grant the miners' organization legal recognition as a union is erroneous.

Many newspapers throughout the country printing the words "union shop" without quotation marks, or even with them for that matter, have inadvertently given the public the belief that the coal operators were simply against the prevalence of union conditions or unionization.

Now actually what John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers achieved by the latest contract, which had the blessing of the Roosevelt administration, was a monopoly on unionization. Under the terms of the contract, not only are the coal miners now employed members of the union, but the employers must agree as a condition of employment to require that any new workers must join the union.

One of the reasons why this is often differentiated from a "closed shop" is that, in some union contracts, the union makes the employer agree to ask the union to furnish workers when vacancies occur and the employer undertakes in advance to accept the union list for employment purposes.

Under the miners' contract, the unions need not furnish employees and the employer can hire anybody he pleases, but when he does hire a coal digger, the worker must agree with the employer to become a union member or he cannot have the job.

In the case of the miners' contracts, some of the workers who are employed at the surface of the mines are not obliged to have union cards, but all coal digging must be done by union workers. Hence the term "union shop" is really a conspicuous form of "closed shop."

Naturally, the union organizations which use this term would prefer to have everybody call it a "union shop," because the words "closed shop" have acquired a certain unpopularity, whereas "union shop" appears to most people as plausible, and hence strikes carried on with that issue would appear to prejudice the public quickly against the employer's side.

For years, the terms "open shop" and "closed shop" have been used in labor disputes, but the differences in application have often caused misunderstanding and confusion. The so-called "union shop," which is the phrase used in the actual text of the latest coal contract, is in reality a monopoly granted to the United Mine Workers of America as against their competitors, the Progressive Miners' Union, an American Federation of Labor unit.

The question of whether employers should or should not grant the "closed shop," by whatever name it is called, is one that has been the subject of the widest controversy, but it is granted throughout the labor movement, it will mean, of course, that a small group of men will have monopoly over the supply of labor in America. Such monopoly powers have never been granted to other classes of individuals without some form of government regulation. Corporations, for instance, are subjected to various kinds of governmental control nowadays, but they are supposedly responsible to the public interest through their state charters, or through federal agencies. If "closed shops" are to become more numerous, the demand for public regulation of labor union organizations, somewhat as is the case in Great Britain, will doubtless grow too.

5,000th Language Goes in Collection of Librarian
CLEVELAND.—"Mud is your best food; eat more of it" or—in the original Orinoco language—"Mumesechecoco vexia egussa cagua," was the slogan of a rare-food dinner attended by executives and staff members of the Cleveland public library in celebration of Koko of the Congo, the 5,000th language to be added to the library's John C. White collection.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS
These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 92—"New York"

Many of the homes of this area contain a picture of a large steamboat—a colored picture showing a magnificent white passenger vessel against the background of a green towering mountain. This picture shows the steamboat "New York," one of the vessels of the celebrated Hudson River Dayline, whose career was cut short after 21 years of service by a fire which burned her to the water's edge.

The steel hull of the "New York" was built by Harlan & Hollingsworth at Wilmington, Delaware, in 1887. W. & A. Fletcher Company (North River Iron Works), of Hoboken, New Jersey, built her engine. Her hull was 301 feet long with an overall length of 311 feet, a breadth of beam of 40 feet 4 inches which widened to 74 feet over the guards, depth of hold measuring 11 feet 2 inches. Her gross tonnage was listed at 1,552 tons, with a net tonnage rating of 1,091.

The vertical beam engine of the "New York" had a cylinder diameter of 75 inches with a 12 foot stroke, and she carried three 33 foot boilers with a shell diameter 9 1/2 feet and front width measuring 11 feet. Her wheels, of the so quickly that in less than five minutes from the time the alarm was sounded, the after end of the magnificent steamer was in flames. Captain Harquet realized that it would be impossible to save the vessel and ordered the crew ashore, but soon after they had landed it was discovered that four colored welders were missing. A search of the shipyard was unsuccessful—and later it was found that the four men had been trapped below the decks by the flames and had perished.

The "New York" was completely destroyed and later the engine was taken from the smoke-blackened hull, rebuilt, and placed in the new steamboat "Robert Fulton," which is now in service under the banner of the Hudson River Dayline.

Barbers' Union Charges Breach

An interesting case involving two master barbers of the city and the Journeymen Barbers' Union, came up in city court today, and was adjourned for one week.

The action was brought by LeRoy Sleight as president of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, Local 534, against Emanuel F. Colao, who operates a barbershop at 65 East Strand, and Nicholas J. Lalima, who operates a shop at 17 Railroad avenue.

The action is instituted to recover $100 each for alleged violation of the fair trade agreement between the two master barbers and the union.

According to the papers in the case the agreement was signed on March 10, 1938, and fixes the prices for haircuts, shaves and other work usually performed in barber shops and also wages and hours for barbers employed in the shops.

The information alleges that both master barbers cut prices, and the action is brought to recover on the promissory notes for $100 each filed by the two master barbers at the time it is alleged they signed the agreement.

The law firm of Flanagan & Kaercher represented the barbers' union.

There have been months of scrambling and in one western city it was reported that the liberal-conservative fight became so intense that the labor candidate slipped in and grabbed the prize of sponsoring the royal visit.

But finally the Ontario government arranged for a special train to carry the quintets to Toronto, under a guard as close as that of the royal visitors. They will be received by the King and Queen in strict privacy and will be hurried back home without being seen by the Toronto public.

Church Will Use Playground Space

The good sized lot fronting on Pearl street and adjoining St. Joseph's convent is being put in shape for a recreational center for the young people of the First Reformed Church. The lot, which is about 60 feet front on Pearl street and 149 feet deep, narrowing on the north to 46 feet in width, was given to the church some 17 years ago by the Misses Mary Isabella, Katherine B. and Petronella B. Forsyth, being part of the Forsyth property on Fair and Pearl streets. The church idea was that the church would use it for the purpose of erecting a paragonage thereon.

The move to use it for recreational purposes was inaugurated by Mrs. A. E. Oudemool, and with the sanction of the consistory of the church it will be adapted to such purpose. Church organizations have contributed toward a fund for placing the grounds in condition for enjoyment by the young folks.

Announcement Sunday stated that facilities for playing of volleyball, badminton, ping pong and horseshoe pitching would probably be ready this week and donation of a croquet set would be appreciated.

There is a brick and stone garage at the rear of the property which can be used for storage of game material and also doubtless can be utilized in the sports program.

Gas Pumps Come and Go
Now Shell, Now Texaco

Interest in the Glasco section recently has centered on the question as to whether Texaco or Shell pumps shall be used at the junction of route 9-W and the road to Glasco.

For some time the station used Texaco gas, but about two weeks ago the six Texaco pumps were removed and Shell pumps put in their place. This stood for a few days when three of the Shell pumps were removed and replaced by Texaco. An attempt to make further changes about a week ago was thwarted by the presence of Deputy Sheriff Wesley O'Brien, who has been on guard there, assisted by Deputy McCullough.

Later three more Texaco pumps were put into place and that company, at last reports, controlled the situation.

The Edwards station disposes of a considerable amount of gasoline during the year and there are reports that the matter may become the subject of court action before it is settled.

Dime-A-Piece Spectators See Keeper-Python Battle

New York, May 16 (AP)—Only two spectators—each paid a dime to get in—saw a man's battle for life against a python at the New York World's Fair.

Dr. Hal Hall, keeper in the "Live Monster Show," had leaned over a tank to tend a 30-foot python yesterday when one of the giant reptiles behind him worked its head out of a leather muzzle and struck.

The python—non-poisonous—clamped its jaws on Dr. Hall's forearm and quickly wrapped two coils around his upper arm and knee.

Seven attendants, summoned by the keeper's frantic cries, labored for ten minutes to release him. His injuries apparently were not serious.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaciff.

Yesterday: Nola, Thorn's fiancée, becomes acquainted with Tally.

Chapter 14
Visit To The Macks

"IT'S TIME you got your sense of humor back," Nola insisted. "You have a place to live, plenty to eat, and Bob says your roadside stand is making money." Placing her hands on her hips, she tossed her head and laughed. "If I had no sense of humor I'd be in an asylum!" she told him. "Mother got the idea last year of having a genealogist describe the family tree. When she found out Dad's ancestors were blacksmiths, leather-tanners, and cobblers, she had a nervous breakdown. My great-grandfather, the one who founded the Cranston shoe factories, was only a poor cobbler who came to America via steerage. And since I decided to give away part of my money I've been hounded by cranks and radicals to the point where I wish I had no money!"

"I read something about it in the papers but I figured it was just a publicity stunt," Tally commented. "I can't imagine anyone giving away millions."

"I can't imagine anyone keeping them!" she retorted. "What good are they? I couldn't spend them if I tried. However, it begins to look as if I can't even give money away without starting a revolution. I wish I knew what to do."

His brows puckered thoughtfully. "If it were my money," he said slowly. "I think I'd give it to the government for re-forestation. I would draw up a contract stipulating the money could be used only for that one purpose and that a strict accounting must be offered. A person who did a thing like that would go down in history as a nation's benefactor."

Nola caught some of his eagerness. "Perhaps that is the solution—the idea I've been looking for. But this contract business," he offered, "or draft it out for you before you went to your lawyer."

"But I thought you were a farmer?"

"I am. I did study law, though, at Texas University. I passed my bar examinations but I never practiced."

"Why not?"

"Couldn't." He shrugged, wondering at the urge which prompted him to talk so much to this strange girl. "Things got bad on the farm and we had to let the hired help go. Gramp is too old to work, so it was up to me. I had dreams once but they disappeared into reality. Oh, I'm not sorry for myself. I like farming all right."

"Do you know," she announced with sincere candor, "I like you, Tally Mack!"

A flush spread over his tan cheeks. He felt a sudden lightening of the heaviness which had settled in his chest a few weeks ago.

"I'd like very much to meet the rest of your family, Tally. Grand-ma, Jocelyn used to talk to me about your grandfather."

"All right. I'll take you in the house, but I can't stay. Have to get this plowing finished before the sun is too hot."

As they walked toward the house he found himself talking to her more freely than he had talked to anyone for many months. He realized that he had missed the companionship of persons his own age much more than he had admitted to himself. A sudden rebellious thought marred his pleasure: why couldn't Jocelyn Russell have been like Nola? Yet, being inately just, he saw that it might be different if Nola owned Seaciff.

Lurking Mischief

MRS. MACK was putting away the breakfast dishes when they entered the kitchen. When Tally informed her of her identity of her visitor, she smiled shyly, obviously abashed in the presence of an heiress to millions. Nola, perceiving this, promptly sat down, eyed the coffee-pot on the stove and said:

"Any coffee left? I never eat breakfast but I could go for some coffee!"

Mrs. Mack, pleased, set a cup and saucer on the recently scrubbed oilcloth and poured a cup full of strong, steaming liquid. Old Mack, hearing a strange feminine voice, came ambulating in from his "settin' room" and took a sizing-up look at Nola.

"Ho," he said, "where'd you come from?"

"Don't shoot!" Nola laughed. "I'm a stranger in these parts."

When Tally reluctantly left, Nola's quick laughter followed him. Watching from the corner of his eyes as he guided the horses over the furrows, he saw her go with Gramp toward the orchard. Gretchen would like Nola, too, he decided.

Nola appeared at the luncheon table with lurking mischief in her eyes. Thorndyke, seating her, inquired, "What the devil have you been up to, Nola? I saw you coming into the house about an hour ago in the queerest-looking outfit."

"I have been visiting the Macks. All of them. I find them charming."

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. "Lyn said, 'You can't mean that, Nola.'"

"But I do. Definitely. The old man is a quaint and fascinating character; the girl is sweet and unbelievably naive; and the child is a smart little tyke. As for young Talbot—" Nola paused for effect—"I fear you know nothing about him at all."

"I know enough," Lyn returned shortly.

"Did you know he is a college graduate with a lawyer's degree?"

Nola persisted. "That the only reason he has never practiced is because of crop failure? He has a grand sense of humor and he's lots of fun. I like him. I believe he likes me, too."

Jocelyn suddenly wanted to cry. Her lips trembled. "I hate him and he hates me," she said. "Nevertheless, if you like him I suppose I shall have to treat him decently while you're here."

"You will," threatened Nola. "Or I shall complain bitterly!"

Thorn seemed to be having difficulty swallowing a piece of toast. He also had difficulty in suppressing his desire to remonstrate with Nola about this new whim of hers. However, past experience had taught him not to interfere with Nola's whims. Interference only drove her to extremes. She liked to shock people. She was absolutely unpredictable. Her social position and her money made her impervious to anyone's opinion and she did exactly as she pleased. Still, he mused forlornly, as mad as she was at times, he loved her. She enchanted and captivated him. He wanted to marry her more than he had ever wanted to do anything in his life.

And so he swallowed his toast and said nothing.

'Bull In A China Shop'

"THORN," Lyn said the first moment they were alone, "our crowd is throwing the annual spring dance at the club tomorrow night. Remember? Nola is planning on you two going with Geoff and me."

"That should be nice," he offered absently. "Say, do you suppose Nola is really gone on that farmer chap?"

"How should I know? Listen—I want you to make Bob invite Talbot Mack to that dance tomorrow night."

"What is this?" he protested. "Are you crazy, too? First, you can't stand the sight of him, and now you want him at the dance?"

"I know what I'm doing. Nola has the idea that dear Tally is being persecuted and she's decided to champion him. If she does our lives will be miserable for the next few months. We must stop it now. Has many ideas penetrated that dense skull of yours, dear brother, or must I draw a diagram?"

"You mean—let her see him against the background of our society crowd? He'd be a bull in a china shop!"

Late that afternoon when Bob hesitatingly broached the subject of the dance to Tally, that young man said almost the same thing.

"So they want to show me up in front of their friends, eh? Nola must have been booting me and they want her to see what a dull clod I am."

"I'm ashamed of them," Bob said with sincerity. "I would have refused to ask you if I hadn't had a remarkable inspiration. 'Okay, Bob,' he agreed. 'Nola says I've lost my sense of humor. Maybe this inspiration of yours will restore it.'"

The cool April evening was clear and star-radiant. The open windows in the immense ballroom of the Dunes Country Club looked out on a serene expanse of dark ocean. The air was salty and brisk and stimulating. A young spring moon rode high.

The orchestra from the Biltmore Hotel in town was playing a smooth swing rhythm when Thorndyke parked his sedan near the first tee of the golf course and helped Nola and Jocelyn out. A figure detached itself from a group on the veranda and came toward them.

"Have you been waiting long, Geoff?" Thorn greeted.

"About ten minutes. Sorry I couldn't join you for dinner, Lyn. One of the new ponies was sick and I had the vet over. He's still there. I may have to take a run over to my place later on—your room?"

"Why should I mind?" she parried. "I'm quite accustomed to being neglected for horses, Geoff."

"That isn't fair, Lyn," he protested, taking one of her hands in both of his. "I know how much this match with Cloverbrook means to the club."

Jocelyn smiled up into his face. "I was only joking, Geoff. I want the Dunes team to win as much as you do."

"We all want you to win," Nola asserted. "I hope your dancing has improved since the last time I was out here."

Continued tomorrow.

In a badly-lit cafe, seafaring men smoked and drank their rum. Suddenly a huge man burst through the doors.

"Is there anyone here called Pederson?" he roared.

No one spoke. A few customers began to edge their way uneasily toward the door.

"Is there anyone here called Pederson?" he demanded again.

A very small, timid man rose from a table in one corner and said: "Yes, my name is Pederson. Who wants me?"

"Oh, so you're Pederson, are you?" growled the man-mountain. "I've a debt to settle with you."

He strode across the room, picked up the little man with one hand and battered him senseless with the other. He then dropped him on the floor and left the cafe.

Twenty minutes later the little man recovered consciousness, got up painfully, smiled, and feebly said aloud: "I thought I could fool him. My name's not Pederson."

Millionaire (speaking to body of students)—All my success, all my tremendous wealth and financial prestige, I owe to one thing alone, pluck, pluck, pluck!

Student—But how are we to find the right people to pluck?

Mr. Gimms—Say, do you know a fellow down your way with one leg named Wilson?

Mr. Dubb (doubtfully)—Well now, I'm not sure. What's the name of the other leg?

It is not the groundless gossip about us which causes the worry.

Friend—How is your insomnia?

Mr. Munn—Worse than ever. Now I can't even sleep when it's time to get up.

A certain chap believes that he should be able to draw his weekly salary in the middle of the week when he needs it. He says it is just a matter of one person's faith in another. If he can trust the company for the first half of the week, it can trust him for the second half.

Sylvia—Do you know that I have the soul of an artist?

Frank—I knew you painted the minute I looked at your face.

What's the use? By the time you are prosperous enough to give your wife everything, she goes out and buys it herself.

Quiggle—Don't you find it hard to meet expenses these days?

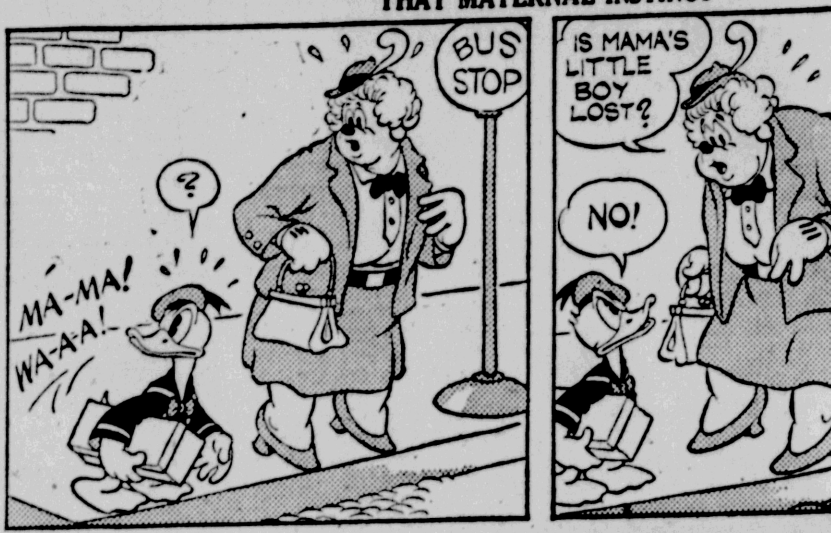

Peewitt—Hard. I should say not. Why, man alive, I meet expenses every turn.

Nobody knows exactly what the "theme center" of the New York World's Fair means, but it looks like a giant billiard ball and a three-cornered one. Perhaps it means that civilization, in 1939, is still behind the eight-ball.

Tuberculosis and Public Health Annual Meeting

(Official Report)

The annual conference of the state and local committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health, State Charities Aid Association, was held last Thursday and Friday at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York city, and was attended by a large number of delegates from various communities in the state. There were also two luncheons held in the grand ball room of the Roosevelt, one each day, which were attended by some 200 guests including many men and women of distinction. Inspiring and informing addresses were given at the luncheons and valuable discussions followed the timely talks at the regular sessions held in the assembly foyer of the hotel.

The Ulster County Tuberculosis and Public Health Committee was represented by Miss Katherine Murphy, county tuberculosis visiting nurse and permanent secretary of the Tuberculosis Committee, and Mrs. Clara N. Reed, committee vice-president. They brought back the good news that Ralph Short, Kingston Daily Freeman photographer, had secured very favorable comment for his exhibit at the camera show of "The Double-barred Cross in Pictures." The photo was that of an angel of mercy bowing before the double cross.

The opening session on "Symposium on Matters Relative to the Organization, Administration, Services and Finances of Local Associations," was presided over by George J. Nelbach, executive secretary of the State Committee. Daniel Becker, president of the Newburgh Association, gave a very timely and pertinent talk on the subject "Keeping the Local Association's Constituency Informed Through Issuance of Periodic Bulletins and News Letters."

Dr. H. E. Kleinschmidt, director of health education, National Tuberculosis Association, offered considerable food for thought in his illuminating talk on "Modern Concepts of Tuberculosis in Children and Their Bearing on Preventive and Health Camps." He strongly favored the hospitalizing of patients and the keeping track of contacts rather than the taking of children out of their home and home surroundings, even to send them to preventive and summer camps. Since the degree of danger from infection depends upon the part of the body immediately infected, and in many cases there followed a natural immunization, Dr. Kleinschmidt definitely favored the keeping of the children, under observation at home. Dr. Meyer of the National Tuberculosis Association is responsible for this newest theory relative to contact children.

The luncheon on Thursday was presided over by Livingston Farland, M. D., L. D., the first speaker being George St. J. Perrott, Washington, D. C., secretary, Interdepartmental Committee on Health and Welfare, and director, National Health Survey, United States Public Health Service. In spite of the multiplicity of details and statistics, the address he gave on "The National Health Program," was packed full of valuable information and interest.

Homer Folks, L. L. D., of Yonkers, secretary State Charities Aid Association and chairman of special committee, that drafted the program, brought to its vitalizing subject—"The National State-School Program to Prevent Tuberculosis," all of his usual and infectious enthusiasm and important information.

The symposium of which Homer Folks' address was the introduction, was continued in the afternoon in the assembly foyer by Dr. Emerson Kendall, member of the State Executive Committee, managing director of N. T. A.

The Rev. John M. Duffy of Rochester, superintendent of Rochester parochial schools and chairman, School Superintendents' Department, National Catholic Educational Association, brought new light to bear on his subject, "How Local Associations Can Assist With Health Teaching Programs in Parochial Schools."

Another valuable address during the symposium was given by James J. Alinger, D. S., Buffalo, board member, Buffalo Tuberculosis Association, whose topic was "Practical Procedures for Local Associations in Promoting Increased Official Health Services." In addition to his operation proved conclusively that there is definite need for more public health nurses.

Friday morning was largely devoted to discussions on the subject, "Public Health Nursing Needs of Counties Generally and of Cities Having Upwards of 50,000 Population in Upstate New York." A particularly thought-provoking section of the general discussion was that on "New Local Associations May Effectively Cooperate with Existing Public Health Nursing Services," given by Mrs. Elizabeth Huggs Zellar, R. D., Ithaca, executive secretary, Tompkins County Association.

Friday's luncheon was presided over by the Hon. Peter Cantline of Newburgh, chairman, state committee. "The Value and Significance to New York State of the Federal Program to Control Syphilis," was the subject of a most timely address given by Edward S. Godfrey, Jr., M. D., Albany, state commissioner of health, president-elect, American Public Health Association.

The final address, "Conclusions and Recommendations About Health Work in the Schools of the State, Growing out of the State Board of Regents' Recent Inquiry into the Character and State of Public Education in the State of New York," was delivered by C. E. A. Winslow, Dr. P. H., New Haven, professor of public health, Yale University, director of the School Health Aspects of the Regents' Inquiry. Though technical it was very valuable.

The Hon. Peter Cantline of Newburgh presided at the closing session of the conference which was the annual business meeting of the S. C. A. A. State Committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health.

TROOPS GUARD HARLAN MINE AREA

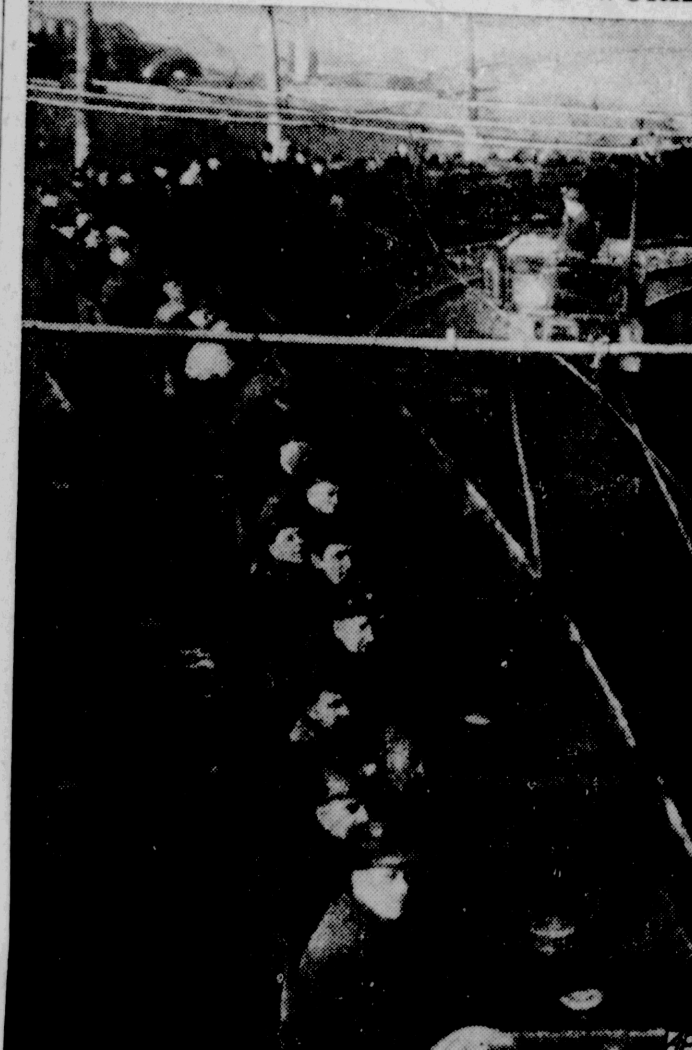

Kentucky National Guardsmen, protecting workers returning to pits around Harlan, Ky., despite failure of operators to sign union contracts, were stationed at mines where trouble threatened. One mine employ was clubbed over the head with a pistol in a clash with a guardsman but authorities said two shootings, one fatal, were not connected with the soft coal situation. Above guardsmen are shown on duty at a mine tippie near Harlan.

MACHINE GUN 'NEST' IN HARLAN

Kentucky National Guardsmen stand watch over a road near Harlan, their machine guns pointing in a businesslike way toward mine pickets crowding around the buildings in the background. Troop reinforcements were sent into Harlan after the death of one non-union miner, the shooting of a man reported in the ranks of Harlan operators opposing a new contract with John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers when one of the largest mines moved to open negotiations with the union.

PENNSYLVANIA MINERS GO TO WORK

Following signature of new union contracts by operators in the Pennsylvania area, these soft coal miners formed part of the big parade back to work. Picture was made at the Pittsburgh Coal Company's big Montour No. 10 mine at Liberty, Pa., not far from Pittsburgh. Meantime in the Harlan, Ky., area, where many operators refused to sign up, trouble threatened as mines were reopened.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need. Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

John Burke

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—John Burke, 79, who as a welterweight boxer fought 110 rounds at New Orleans April 6, 1893 against A. Bowen, a negro. The seven-hour, 19 minutes draw was reputedly the longest "glove" fight in history.

MEDICAL PROBLEMS

It begins to seem clear that, in one way or another, the American people are going to get the medical care which our medical profession—the best in the world—is able to give them. It is mostly a matter of spreading the doctors' knowledge and skill around where they are needed, instead of leaving it so much to chance.

Dr. E. C. Winslow, public health professor at Yale University School of Medicine, makes this bold statement: "What income groups are to be covered in group medical care programs, and how the doctors' fees are to be paid, are not questions to be solved by the medical profession." The doctor's job is to heal the sick, and giving him a chance and providing his pay is a job for economists and society in general.

He urges physicians to forget the economic aspects of medical service, and to concentrate on solving the two great medical problems—"how service is to be rendered to insured groups, whether by salaried physicians or through specified fees, and how the quality of the service is to be guaranteed."

It is remarkable how this attitude seems to be spreading, among physicians as well as the public.

MODERN CHIVALRY

Sure, chivalry still survives. You can see it occasionally even in street cars. And it assumes new forms. Here is a case observed the other day in a city where it's a long way down town.

It was the morning rush hour and the seats were all filled when an old lady entered. A man promptly rose and gave her his seat. Half-way down, the hero felt a touch on his arm and turned. Another man, in possession of a perfectly good seat, had risen and was motioning him to the vacant place. "It's only fair," the second hero said, as the first one protested. "You've stood up half the way; I'll take the other half."

Division of courtesy may be a novel idea, but it's perfectly logical. And there would be a whole lot more courtesy shown, in street cars and elsewhere, if men once got the idea of dividing the inconvenience or discomfort in a businesslike way.

MAIN STREET MOBILIZES

The stranger drifted into the office and looked around uncertainly, came and sat gently down on the edge of the editor's desk, and said: "I just came in to report on conditions at the front. That is, you understand, in our neighborhood. The situation's getting very complicated."

"It's been a pretty good neighborhood, you understand. People of several racial origins, but sort of old and settled. Little disputes breaking out now and then, and women making trouble sometimes about social prestige, and the men getting het up over politics or business conditions or garbage disposal, as they fussed around their backyards, but nothing serious."

"Then lately some of 'em began feeling sort of scared by things they heard about some of the other fellows. There seemed to be grudges developing, and little scraps breaking out. And Bill Jones, who's always been a pretty good egg, drops around where I'm smokin' on my back porch one evening, and says: 'Jim, I don't like the way these guys in back here are acting. There's Sam Andrews, who ain't naturally very sociable anyway—he scowled at me as I was coming past his house last night. And with him was Joe Muller. It looked like they were cookin' up something. I heard one of 'em mention your name. Honest, I don't feel safe. And maybe you're not.'"

"Now," says he, "suppose you an' I make a sort of agreement, that if either of those boozes make a pass at either of us, we'll stand together against 'em."

"Well," continued the stranger, "I didn't like the idea. But I wanted to play safe. And finally I agreed to the defensive alliance, as Bill called it. And we felt safer for a few days."

"But doggone it, word got around, and soon some of the other neighbors were saying it was an outrage, and we were not aiming at self-defense but fixing to beat up some innocent people. So a couple of fellows around the corner got mad and announced that if either of us tackled either of them, they'd both hop onto us.

"And then, gosh darn it, if the thing didn't start spreading like wildfire. All the neighbors began taking sides, and we had to get more allies. The other crowd began hollerin' that we were conspiring to upset their garbage cans and sprinkle salt on their lawns and put paris green in their milk. And we began issuing threats, and they came back with ultimatums, and there was no end of talk about invasion and aggression and encirclement and so on. And we were trying to steal their friends and they were corrupting our friends. And nobody really knows what it's about, and a good many of 'em are not even very clear which side they're on, but everybody's awful mad and scared. Now what would you do about it?"

And the editor just sat and looked at the visitor, and looked at his desk, and thought and thought and thought.

ALASKA HIGHWAY

There is some serious objection, in Canada, to the proposed Alaska Highway, running from the State of Washington up the coast through British Columbia to southern Alaska. It would go through Canadian territory for nearly a thousand miles.

The opposition seems to be based not on prejudice or principle, but on practical consideration. In case of war, Conservative statesmen at Ottawa say, the transport of American troops over that road might get Canada into trouble.

The route proposed would obviously make a useful military highway and help to protect Alaska from Asiatic aggression. But the Canadian objection is understandable. Any defense against an attack from Asia, in that quarter, might be as useful to Canada as to the United States; but if Canadians have any such fear as Ottawa debate indicates, the military use of the road need not be insisted on.

It would probably justify itself merely as a route for tourists and civilian transport. As such, it would be an important and picturesque link in the great All-American highway down the western side of North and South America, from the Arctic to the Antarctic.

The "man over 40" can usually keep a job if he has it, but can't get one if he hasn't. He needs a break before he's broke.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

 PREVENTING FLAT FEET

One of the worst cases of flat feet I have ever seen was that of a recruit who wished to go overseas during the war. The examining physician rejected him and he was referred to me as president of the medical board. His arches were all the way down on the floor. After having him walk around the armory floor, bare-footed, he knelt down and there was not a white spot on the whole sole of the foot. He informed me that he had walked nearly thirty miles to be examined and that he was one of the contenders in a three-mile walking race the next day against the world's amateur champion. He was second to the world's champion in the race and claimed that he could walk ten times the distance without feeling any pain in his feet.

Why was this man with such flat feet able to walk without pain? Walking did not cause pain because the ligaments binding the bones of the foot together were not rigid nor had the tendons of the muscles become too hard. It is this lack of "rigidity" that enables a dancer with flat feet to still do the ballet. However, in most cases where the arch—crossways of the foot—is down on the floor, the foot is rigid and after taking a plaster cast of the foot, an arch support gives relief. It is usually too late to use exercises or other methods of treatment. It is, however, the beginning of early cases of flat feet that can and should be helped because exercise can lift up and hold the arch, making arch supports unnecessary.

Dr. Bryan Keon-Cohen, Melbourne, in The Medical Journal of Australia, says: "Raising and lengthening the heel of the shoe puts the weight of the body on the proper bone or bones, prevents the toes turning out, and supports the weakened structures on the inside of the heel and foot. All the patients' shoes must be similarly altered; no slippers or sandshoes are permitted, and in no circumstances whatever may weight bearing be allowed unless the proper footwear is worn."

The exercises most used to raise and hold up the arch are (a) walking on the outside of the feet, (b) raising on toes, and (c) trying to grasp an object—marble or other round object—with the toes.

Croesus' Mines Found
 Turkey reports the discovery of the gold mines of Croesus, millionaire king of Lydia in the Sixth century B. C. The richest finds are at Sart, close under the ruins of Sardes, capital of the Lydian empire. Croesus is reputed to have gathered his fabulous wealth from the golden sands of the Pactolus, a stream which flows through Sardes and into the Hermus (Gediz) river. Under Croesus, Lydia grew from a small kingdom to a powerful empire ruling all Asia Minor. The Lydians were supposedly the first to use a system of currency. Archaeologists have found some of the electrum coins struck off in Croesus' mint. Electrum, a native alloy of gold and silver, was mined on the banks of the Pactolus.

Today in Washington

Monopoly Granted to United Mine Workers as Against Their Competitors, the Progressive Miners' Union
 By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1939)
 Washington, May 16.—Do the American people know what the coal strike was about, and were the issues clearly defined in authoritative manner by the parties at interest?

The answer to this question must be negative, because the term "union shop," around which the controversy was waged, is being used without quotation marks in most all press dispatches as if the public were really familiar with the term.

It might be supposed from such a reading that the coal operators refused to recognize unionism. As a matter of fact, the words "union shop" and "closed shop" are virtually synonymous as applied in the contract signed by some of the Appalachian area operators.

The National Labor Relations Act, popularly known as the Wagner law, compels employers to recognize whatever union has a majority of the employees in a given unit, which may be an industry or a particular plant. It would indeed be a violation of the law for a coal operator to refuse to recognize for collective bargaining the union employees who have a majority. So any impression that the coal operators declined to grant the miners' organization legal recognition as a union is erroneous.

Many newspapers throughout the country printing the words "union shop" without quotation marks, or even with them for that matter, have inadvertently given the public the belief that the coal operators were simply against the prevalence of union conditions or unionization.

Now actually what John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers achieved by the latest contract, which had the blessing of the Roosevelt administration, was a monopoly on unionization. Under the terms of the contract, not only are the coal miners now employed members of the union, but the employers must agree as a condition of employment to require that any new workers must join the union.

One of the reasons why this is often differentiated from a "closed shop" is that, in some union contracts, the union makes the employer agree to ask the union to furnish workers when vacancies occur and the employer undertakes in advance to accept the union list for employment purposes.

Under the miners' contract, the unions need not furnish employees and the employer can hire anybody he pleases, but, when he does hire a coal digger, the worker must agree with the employer to become a union member or he cannot have the job.

In the case of the miners' contracts, some of the workers who are employed at the surface of the mines are not obliged to have union cards, but all coal digging must be done by union workers. Hence the term "union shop" is really a conspicuous form of "closed shop."

Naturally, the union organizations which use this term would prefer to have everybody call it a "union shop," because the words "closed shop" have acquired a certain unpopularity, whereas "union shop" appears to most people as plausible, and hence strikes carried on with that issue would appear to prejudice the public quickly against the employer side.

For years, the terms "open shop" and "closed shop" have been used in labor disputes, but the differences in application have often caused misunderstanding and confusion.

The so-called "union shop," which is the phrase used in the actual text of the latest coal contract, is in reality a monopoly granted to the United Mine Workers of America as against their competitors, the Progressive Miners' Union, an American Federation of Labor unit.

The question of whether employers should or should not grant the "closed shop," by whatever name it is called, is one that has been the subject of the widest controversy, but, if it is granted throughout the labor movement, it will mean, of course, that a small group of men will have monopoly over the supply of labor in America. Such monopoly powers have never been granted to other classes of individuals without some form of government regulation. Corporations, for instance, are subjected to various kinds of governmental control nowadays, but they are supposedly responsible to the public interest through their state charters, or through federal agencies. If "closed shops" are to become more numerous, the demand for public regulation of labor union organizations, somewhat as is the case in Great Britain, will doubtless grow too.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

No. 92—"New York"

Many of the homes of this area contain a picture of a large steamboat—a colored picture showing a magnificent white passenger vessel against the background of a green towering mountain. This picture shows the steamboat "New York," one of the vessels of the celebrated Hudson River Dayline, whose career was cut short after 21 years of service by a fire which burned her to the water's edge.

The steel hull of the "New York" was built by Harlan & Hollingsworth at Wilmington, Delaware, in 1887. W. & A. Fletcher Company (North River Iron Works), of Hoboken, New Jersey, built her engine. Her hull was 301 feet long with an overall length of 311 feet, a breadth of beam of 40 feet over the guards, depth of hold measuring 11 feet 2 inches. Her gross tonnage was listed at 1,552 tons, with a net tonnage rating of 1,091.

The vertical beam engine of the "New York" had a cylinder diameter of 75 inches with a 12 foot stroke, and she carried three 33 foot boilers with a shell diameter 9 1/2 feet and front width measuring 11 feet. Her wheels, of the feathering type, were constructed of steel with 12 buckets measuring 12 1/2 feet long by 3 feet 9 inches in width. In 1897 the "New York" was lengthened, 34 feet being added to the length of her hull making her 335 feet long and increasing her tonnage rating to 1,921 gross and 1,751 net tons.

The "New York" replaced the steamboat "Chauncey Vibbard" which had been in service for years on the Hudson River Dayline. She was the second steel-hulled vessel built for the Dayline, and combined speed, luxury and beauty to surpass in elegance and appearance any marine craft built for the Hudson river up to that period.

The construction of the "New York" was somewhat different from the usual methods of steamboat construction, thus giving her a bit different appearance from the usual Hudson river boats. Instead of placing the shaft forward of the cylinder as in most beam engines, the cylinder was placed forward of the shaft.

On August 14, 1907, the "New York" made the run from New York to Albany in six hours and 13 minutes, an indication of the speed which the steamboat possessed, and together with her consort, the "Albany," she formed a combination which was unquestionably the finest river day boat passenger steamers in the world.

October 1908 marked the event which indirectly led to the destruction of the "New York." The tugboat "William Flannery" crashed into the "New York" in the North River off West 13th street, damaging the Dayline steamer to such an extent around the guards, that she was taken to the Thomas Marvel Shipbuilding yards at Newburgh for repairs. On the morning of October 16, 1908, at 12:55 a. m., as she lay at the yards in Newburgh, fire was discovered in the after hold of the "New York." Captain A. H. Harcourt and the crew of 75 men were asleep in their berths but were aroused in time to get ashore safely. The fire gained headway so quickly that in less than five minutes from the time the alarm was sounded, the after end of the magnificent steamer was in flames. Captain Harcourt realized that it would be impossible to save the vessel and ordered the crew ashore, but soon after they had landed it was discovered that four colored waiters were missing. A search of the shipyard was unsuccessful—and later it was found that the four men had been trapped below the decks by the flames and had perished.

The "New York" was completely destroyed, and later the engine was taken from the smoke-blackened hull, rebuilt, and placed in the new steamboat "Robert Fulton," which is now in service under the banner of the Hudson River Dayline.

Spring Thoughts

Spring is such a splendid Season
That Everyone likes
for various reasons

Some like the air
—so warm, so soft,
Some like the sky
so lovely aloft

And some proclaim
that for Nature's best,
her budding flowers
eclipse the rest

Still others admire
the drops of dew
That glisten brightly
when day is new

But as for me,
I like every thing
Each has its place
in the scheme of Spring

All blend together
wonderfully right—
A "super-production"
of sound and sight

It's the masterpiece
of God's creating—
Spring, to me
gets highest rating

Willard Centenary Observed By 300

An audience of about 300 persons assembled in the First Baptist Church Sunday evening, May 14, to pay honor to the memory of Miss Frances E. Willard whose centenary is being observed this year by the White Ribboners throughout the world. In the audience were leading members of the clergy, D. A. R., Salvation Army and W. C. T. U. The Scripture lesson was read by the Rev. D. Linton Doherty, pastor of the Roundout Presbyterian Church, and prayer was offered by the Rev. W. R. Peckham, pastor of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church. A hymn, "On Heights of Power," written by Miss Willard, was sung by Mrs. Raymond Rignall and a male quartet. Mrs. George Shults, as president of the local W. C. T. U., conducted this meeting and gave a brief sketch of the life and wonderful achievements of Miss Willard. She said that New York state would be hostess this year to the national convention of the W. C. T. U., at Rochester, during September 27-October 3, and that on September 28 a pilgrimage would be made to Churchville, the birthplace of Miss Willard. Mrs. Shults read a list of 22 different types of memorials, given in honor of Miss Willard.

Mrs. Burdette Tuttle, regent of the American Revolution, was introduced by Mrs. Shults. Mrs. Tuttle said she had attended the continental congress of the national society of the D. A. R. about the middle of April. On the front of the program booklet was a full page portrait of Miss Willard. The congress passed a resolution favoring the government's issuing a Frances E. Willard memorial postage stamp. Mrs. Tuttle said that a special program was devoted to tributes to Miss Willard; it was entirely a woman's program and among the speakers were the Hon. Hattie W. Caraway, senator from Arkansas, and Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts. The state regent of Illinois said that Miss Willard was the greatest woman orator that ever addressed an audience; and that her state's proudest boast was that it had produced the two great humanitarians of the modern age: Abraham Lincoln and Frances Willard. Mrs. Tuttle said she would always remember Miss Willard because she was the first great woman she had ever heard speak. As a fitting conclusion to her talk Mrs. Tuttle read Nell B. Bradley's "Torch Bearers."

Mrs. Shults then introduced Mrs. Fred Seiler of the local Salvation Army Corps, who also is a member of the Kingston W. C. T. U. Mrs. Seiler most graciously introduced her "Comrade," Brigadier Agnes McKernan, a leading woman in the Salvation Army and an authority on women's prison work. Miss McKernan said her work presented many problems, but also many joys to her. In the rehabilitation of women and girls she reported 75 per cent as making good. She spoke of the parole system as working out most satisfactorily and cited many case studies in which the cause of crime was alcoholism. In her care of women and girls a very difficult problem is the securing of suitable positions for them after they have been released from prison; homes must also be found for babies. Brigadier McKernan gave great credit to the Salvation Army for its help to society through its prison work. Her address was sprinkled by humor and she held the close attention of the audience throughout.

Palmer Reported Brawl Aggressor

Sarasota, Fla., May 16 (AP)—Potter D'Orsay Palmer, four times married playboy scion of Chicago wealth, was apparently the aggressor, Sheriff C. J. Hutches said today, in a stag picnic fist fight which resulted in his death.

The 34-year-old Palmer died late yesterday of a cerebral hemorrhage which followed a blow on the head Thursday.

Assistant State Attorney W. M. Smiley said Kenneth Nosworthy, a Bradenton meat cutter, voluntarily admitted that he struck Palmer with his fist.

Nosworthy remained at liberty today, Sheriff Hutches asserting he saw no reason to detain him because he was available and "from all I can find out, Palmer was the aggressor."

Palmer was admitted to a hospital Saturday. At his bedside when he died were his parents, the socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer of Sarasota and Chicago, and his bride of less than five months, the former waitress, Pluma Louise Lowery Abatiello.

Assistant State Attorney Smiley said Nosworthy gave this account of the fatal altercation:

Palmer, who had been drinking, singled Nosworthy out, followed him around and taunted him. Nosworthy tried to avoid him but Palmer pursued the meat cutter, cursed him and struck him with his fist.

Nosworthy returned the blow, knocking Palmer to the ground. Palmer pulled Nosworthy down as he fell and the two scuffled briefly and then got to their feet. Palmer then tried to wield a bottle and Nosworthy struck the Sarasotan a hard blow with his fist. The two parted and Palmer left the picnic sometime later.

The extent to which the present Mrs. D'Orsay Palmer might share in her husband's estate will depend on the outcome of involved litigation.

Colonials vs. Mohawks Tonight; Independents Trim Joneses

Toddy Uhl Picked To Pitch Against Strong Upstaters

Perry or Coleman Will Be Opposing Moundsman—Game to Start at 6 P. M. Sharp

At the Athletic Field the Kingston Colonials open their home schedule tonight in the New York State Baseball League against Hank Bozzi's Mohawks.

Uhl's opponent on the hill will be selected from Ed Perry and Slim Coleman with the former as the most likely to get the assignment. Perry hurled against the Colonials in one of the 1938 clashes and handuffed them 6 to 2.

In the estimation of Manager Davi his boys are the strongest aggregation of local stars that has ever assembled on the field to represent the Colonials. However, more will be known as to the fate of his charges about 8 o'clock tonight.

According to present plans Davi will use Johnny Schatzel, Charlie Francello, Bill Finger and Charlie Husta in the infield. Both Francello and Husta were first year men last year and established themselves as reliable players.

Bill Finger, late of Saugerties, will start at short and that plugs up this all-important berth. Schatzel, although not too much of a powerhouse at the platter, has plenty on the ball when it comes to covering the initial sack.

Davi, at least on paper, he thinks, has an outstanding garden patrol. Mac Tiano, Tommy Maines and Bill Thomas will be the three starters and all of them are dangerous batters. If there should be any replacements needed here, Jimmy Martin and Frank Neff will be called upon.

With Toddy Uhl and Charlie Neff set for pitching assignments and Joe Hoffman and "Gaby" Benjamin ready for backstopping, the Colonials have an airtight battery combination. Jim Martin will also be eligible for mound work.

The Giants, champs in the last two seasons of the New York State league, will come into Kingston with a powerhouse unit from the first man down. Always a tough club the Giants will be eager to dust off the Colonials in league competition. The Mohawks have several outstanding hitters, notably Torrence, Jeffries and Milton, the stocky first sacker, who puts on quite a show around the sack. Crumley and Durant, outfielders, are also heavy swatters in the pinches.

Starting line-ups: Colonials—Husta, 3b.; Hoffman, c.; Finger, ss.; M. Tiano, rf.; Thomas, lf.; Maines, cf.; Francello, 2b.; Schatzel, 1b.; Uhl, p. Giants—Durant, lf.; Torrence, cf.; Miller, ss.; Reddie, 2b.; Milton, 1b.; Sampson, 3b.; Jeffries, c.; Coleman, rf.; Perry, p. Umpires—Bill Schwab and Dick Dulin.

Gets Farm Club
Jamestown, N. Y., May 16 (P)—J. G. Campbell, spokesman for baseball interests here, announced last night the Schenectady National League baseball club had concluded a working agreement with the Jamestown team in the Class D pony league. Pittsburgh will use the Jamestown team in the Pennsylvania-Ontario-New York circuit as a farm club, Campbell asserted.

Braddock Picks Lou Nova Over Baer, Because He's Strong

Tommy Reilly Fight Ref Dies

Philadelphia, May 16 (P)—Tommy Reilly, who refereed the memorable fight in the sequentennial stadium in 1926 when Gene Tunney won the heavy-weight title from Jack Dempsey, died last night of a heart ailment. Reilly, whose real name was Frank O'Rourke, was 62.

The pseudonym was adopted when O'Rourke was a fighter himself. Among the important fights at which he officiated were those between Tommy Loughran and Georges Carpentier and Mickey Walker and Leo Lomski.

Softball Results

The Jones Dairymen smothered the YMCA softball team, 21-1, at Loughran Park, with one out, striking out 10 batters, and getting credit for a two-hitter. The further covered himself with glory by contributing a homer, triple and two singles. The Dairymen made 17 hits and Jim Hoyer pitched out his third homer of the season. DeBrosky made two doubles and Van Deusen hit three out of four times up.

The score by innings:
Jones Dairy ..... 303 518 1-21
Y. M. C. A. .... 001 000 0-1

Fullers Win

With three runs in the last inning, the Fullers nosed out the Elks, 9-8, at Block Park. With one out, Zoller singled and Demski doubled. Storms singled to make the score tied at 8-8 and Flemings broke the tie with a single, scoring Storms.

Britt and Snyder made homers for the Elks. Storms and Zoller led the Fullers with three and two hits apiece. Johnny Snyder was the winning pitcher.

Rees Victors

The Central Recreation softies defeated the Empire Liquor tossers 6-3, last night at Block Park. As Ben Fein tossed five hit balls, Hunt, his opponent gave up nine hits.

Harold Broskie hit two doubles and Paul Astalos poled out a triple for the Central. For the Empire Glenn and Olson led the hitters with a pair of singles and two safeties respectively. Johnny Bailey featured with a nice running catch.

Federation Scores

At Hasbrouck Park Monday evening Fair Street took over the St. James softball team 19 to 2 in the Federation of Men's Clubs League. Hurley 5, Wurts Street Baptist 17, Albany Avenue Baptist 13, Trinity M. E. 12. Scheduled for tonight is: Presbyterians vs. Redeemers at Hasbrouck Park; Comforters vs. Port Ewen at armory; Congregational vs. Ulster Park at Barnham Park.

Merchants on Top

A six run rally in the fifth inning won for the Downtown Merchants over the Morgan Socials, 9-8, at Hasbrouck Park. Jack Williams cracked out a homer with the bases loaded, but failed to touch second. Schatzel wallopped a circuit clout for the winners. "Muscles" Balle was the losing pitcher. Epstein and Spiegel were on the mound for the Merchants.

Catholics to Meet

The board of governors, officials and managers of teams in the Catholic Softball League will meet tonight at 8:15 o'clock in St. Mary's School Hall to discuss important matters.

Baptists by 17-5

In a regular Federation League game the Wurts Street Baptists

New York, May 16 (P)—Jim Braddock, the ex-heavyweight champion, is up at Lou Nova's training camp at Nyack, N. Y., giving the young Californian explicit instructions on how to beat the wadding out of Maxie Baer in their fight at Yankee Stadium June 1.

Braddock won his title from Baer, it will be recalled, in one of the big upsets of ring history, so he is in position to give Nova some valuable pointers.

Jim himself is rounding gradually into condition preparatory to invading England early in June for a series of scraps. He's still a master boxer, and he thinks he can get his legs back into good enough shape to hold him up against the sort of heavyweights he will encounter across the water.

"There isn't a doubt in my mind that Nova will whip Baer," said Jim. "This kid is the strongest thing I ever ran into. He's still stout as a bull after five or six rounds. I can't even try to handle him. That's going to be the big difference in their fight. Max hasn't the strength and endurance he'll need against Lou."

Has Good Right

"I guess Max is gambling that he can knock Nova out in the early rounds, because that's the only chance he has. He's going to be greatly surprised, because even if this boy does get knocked down he'll bounce right up. I wouldn't be surprised if Lou wins by a knockout in the late rounds. Max will be mighty tired by that time, and Nova's short right carries lots of power."

Braddock's enthusiasm hasn't been lost on Nova, for he's more confident than ever, if that's possible. He's reached the point now where he says the June 1 engagement is just incidental to his championship bout with Joe Louis in September.

Highland Tennis Club Starts June 4

Highland Tennis Club has practically completed its schedule for the summer season and will open the season against Monroe at Monroe on June 4. The club has arranged games with Poughkeepsie, Shawangunk Country Club at Ellenville, Wappingers Falls, Warwick and possibly the Powelton Club at Newburgh.

Captain J. Corwin and Manager E. D. Randall are still seeking some good material for the club and any player who desires to try out for a position on the team is invited to report to the Rathgeb Court at Highland Sunday. All positions are not yet permanently filled for the season and any southern Ulster player is asked to come out and "show his stuff." Manager Randall also invites a match with Kingston tennis players at some future date.

New Orleans—Tony Canzonieri, 139½, former world's lightweight champion, and Nickie Camarata, 134½, drew, (10).

Holyoke, Mass.—Al Castonguay, 142, Holyoke, outpointed Casey, 145½, Hartford, Conn., (8), defeated Hurley 17-5. The Baptists opened the fourth inning with a barrage of hits, scoring seven runs and kept right on hitting. The slugging starts of the game were led by Broskie, who connected with a homer, triple and single.

Wednesday night the Baptists will tee off against the leaders of the league, Congregational, and will endeavor to cop their third win.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)

The handwriting on the wall does funny things to ball players. They take a look at the big "period" for their ball-playing careers, and sometimes they come apart at the seams altogether.

But sometimes, the merest hint that maybe their coffee and cakes aren't safe if they don't produce gets their "dander" up, and they come back all or at least part of the way.

In this latter group you might take the case of yesterday's winning pitchers on the three-game major league program. There was Wesley Ferrell of the Yankees; Lefty Harry French of the Cubs; and 32-year-old Fritz Ostermueller, the Boston Red Sox southpaw.

Things hadn't been going so well for them recently. The Yanks had just about come right out and told Wes he didn't have many more chances. Lefty Larry lost 19 games in '38 for the Cubs, and when he was belted out his first two starts this season the Chicago front office didn't exactly cheer. And Fritz had been anything but a ball of fire in three previous outings this spring.

Pressure Helps

So yesterday they either had to produce—or else. Since none of them liked that "else," all clocked. Ferrell even did it with a sore elbow. Despite the pain, he went seven innings before giving way to Johnny Murphy. Between them they turned in a five-hitter to blank the Athletics, 3-0, and keep the Yanks a game-and-a-half in front of the American League.

French ran into slight trouble in the second inning, but went on to a six-hit in turning back his old mates, the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-2. Ostermueller was given a lot of hitting support in trouncing the Washington Senators, 9-2, with an eight-hit, elbowing performance.

Wes' win boosted the world champions' victory streak to five straight and marked the second straight day Connie Mack's A's had been blanked by the Yanks. From the Athletics' point of view the only saving feature was the ten putouts credited to Shortstop Skeeter Newsome, which equalled the American League record for the first time since Nap Lajoie did it for the same club in 1901.

French's job for the Cubs kept Gaby Hartnett's boys in fourth place in the National League, and also moved up to within a game and a half of the top. Larry retired 14 Pirates in a row from the fourth to the ninth.

The Red Sox stayed just a game and a half off the Yankees' junior circuit pace. Ostermueller had little difficulty after the Sox climbed aboard Ken Chase for six runs in the first three frames, paced by Joe Voshick who went four-for-four.

K. H. S. Plays Monticello Nine At Athletic Field Wednesday

After a week of inactivity due to the postponement of the Poughkeepsie game last Friday, Coach Cliff Miller's Kingston High School's baseball team will resume DUSO League warfare tomorrow afternoon at the Athletic Field. Monticello will be the visiting club. Game time is scheduled for 4:30 o'clock.

Since the Saugerties game two weeks ago the Millermen have been without actual competition, but it hasn't hampered their performance. In fact, judging from the workouts recently, the layoff has helped.

With two league tilts already in wraps, some fans have dubbed the local Maroon and White tossers as the "Hitless Wonders." And in one way that is true. Ever since Kingston started to perform this year a real hitting star hasn't been spotted. Should the sluggers find themselves Wednesday against Monticello, there won't be any question of how powerful the team will be.

For the last two weeks Miller, along with Dick Whiston and Ed

Sylvester, have all been watching the varsity squad. The work of George Schirick, agile keystone sacker, has improved. According to plans so far it looks as though Cliff Miller will again use Benjamin at third while Captain Jimmy Ashdown takes his post in the outfield.

Monticello is a newcomer in the league's stand this year and their position is not known.

Coach Miller, in view of the important Middletown game Saturday, will start Howie Brooks, a left hander, who turned in an impressive triumph in the Saugerties game recently. Hank Tiano, the No. 1 on the staff, will be held in check for the Middies. Brooks amazed the local fans with his hurling in the Saugerties game and with this fellow as an able starter, some of the worries hanging on the shoulders of Boss Miller are lightened considerably.

Miller will start tomorrow the following men: Infield, Al Decker, George Schirick, Tony Berinato, and Joe Benjamin; outfield, Jim Ashdown, Hank Stoll and John Berardi; Howie Brooks and Ray Lindhurst will form the battery.

Grunies and Boiceville Clash In City League on Wednesday

Grunewalds and the Boiceville Rangers clash in Wednesday's City Loop twilight contest at the Athletic Field starting 6:15 o'clock. There will be no contest tonight, this evening's slated clash having been set back to Monday, June 12, due to the State League game.

Grunies, splitting even in two starts, will be out to get back on the winning road once again. Trounced 10-0 against the Jones Dairy in their last start, the Bakers will gun for the Rangers. Boiceville, making its City League debut last week, lost to the Independents by an 8-1 count. The Rangers looked good in the closing stages and may upset the Weissmen tomorrow.

City Loop Standings

Referee Says

Tony Should Quit

New Orleans, May 16 (P)—Former Lightweight Champion Tony Canzonieri, the little fat man trying to make a comeback, knows today what it means when the ringside boys say "he used to be good once."

This is his home town. Last night thousands who had cheered him on the climb to the lightweight throne, stood up and booed when he fought a 10-round draw through a veil of blood with Nick Camarata, also a local product.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

The Characters
Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress
Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaford.

Yesterday, Nola, Thorn's fiancée, becomes acquainted with Tally.

Chapter 14

Visit To The Macks

"IT'S TIME you got your sense of humor back," Nola insisted. "You have a place to live, plenty to eat, and Bob says your roadside stand is making money." Placing her hands on her hips, she tossed her head and laughed. "If I had no sense of humor I'd be in an asylum," she told him. "Mother got the idea last year of having a genealogist decorate the family tree. When she found out Dad's ancestors were blacksmiths, leather-tanners, and cobblers, she had a nervous breakdown. My great-grandfather, the one who founded the Cranston shoe factories, was only a poor cobbler who came to America via steerage. And since I decided to give away part of my money I've been hounded by cranks and radicals to the point where I wish I had no money."

"I read something about it in the papers but I figured it was just a publicity stunt," Tally commented. "I can't imagine anyone giving away millions."

"I can't imagine anyone keeping them," she retorted. "What good are they? I couldn't spend them if I tried. However, it begins to look as if I can't even give money away without starting a revolution. I wish I knew what to do."

His brow puckered thoughtfully. "If it were my money," he said slowly, "I think I'd give it to the government for re-forestation. I would draw up a contract stipulating the money could be used only for that one purpose and that a strict accounting must be offered a person who did a thing like that would go down in history as a nation's benefactor."

Nola caught some of his eagerness. "Perhaps that is the solution—the idea I've been looking for. But this contract business..."

"I could draw it up for you," he offered, "or draft it out for you before you went to your lawyer."

"But I thought you were a farmer!"

"I am! I did study law, though, at Texas University. I passed my bar examinations but I never practiced."

"Why not?"

"Couldn't," he shrugged, wondering at the urge which prompted him to talk so much to this strange girl. "Things got bad on the farm and we had to let the hired help go. Gramp is too old to work, so it was up to me. I had dreams once but they disappeared into reality. Oh, I'm not sorry for myself... I like farming all right."

"Do you know," she announced with sincere candor, "I like you, Tally Mack!"

A flush spread over his tan cheeks. He felt a sudden lightening of the heaviness which had settled in his chest a few weeks ago.

"I'd like very much to meet the rest of your family, Talbot. Grandma Jocelyn used to talk to me about your grandfather."

"All right! I'll take you in the house, but I can't stay. Have to get this plowing finished before the sun is too hot."

As they walked toward the house he found himself talking to her more freely than he had talked to anyone for many months. He realized that he had missed the companionship of persons his own age much more than he had admitted to himself. A sudden rebellion thought that he had missed the companionship of persons his own age much more than he had admitted to himself.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "You're not listening to me."

"I'm listening," she said. "You're just talking to me about your grandfather."

"Any coffee left? I never eat breakfast but I could go for some coffee!"

Mrs. Mack, pleased, set a cup and saucer on the recently scrubbed tablecloth and poured a cup full of strong steaming liquid. Old Mack, leaning against the door frame, came ambles in from his "settling room" and took a sip of the coffee.

"Hi," he said, "where'd you come from?"

"Don't shoot!" Nola laughed. "I'm a stranger in these parts."

When Tally reluctantly left, Nola's quick laughter followed him. Watching from the corner of his eyes as he guided the horses over the furrows, he saw her go with Gramp toward the orchard. Gramp would like Nola, too, he decided.

Nola appeared at the luncheon table with a lurking mischief in her eyes. Thorn's fiancée, she inquired, "What the devil have you been up to Nola? I saw you coming."

into the house about an hour ago in the queerest-looking outfit. "I have been visiting the Macks. All of them. I find them charming. Good heavens!" he exclaimed. Lyn said, "You can't mean that, Nola."

"But I do. Definitely. The old man is a quaint and fascinating character; the girl is sweet and unbelievably naive; and the child is a smart little tyke. As for young Talbot—" Nola paused for effect. "I fear you know nothing about him at all."

"I know enough," Lyn returned shortly. "Did you know he is a college graduate with a lawyer's degree?"

Nola persisted. "That the only reason he has never practiced is because of crop failure? He has a grand sense of humor and he's lots of fun. I like him. I believe he likes me, too."

Jocelyn suddenly wanted to cry. Her lips trembled. "I hate him and he hates me," she said. "Nevertheless, if you like him I suppose I shall have to treat him decently while you're here."

"You will," threatened Nola. "or I shall complain bitterly!"

Thorn seemed to be having difficulty swallowing a piece of toast. He also had difficulty in suppressing his desire to remonstrate with Nola about this new whim of hers.

However, past experience had taught him not to interfere with Nola's whims. Interference only drove her to extremes. She liked to shock people. She was absolutely unpredictable. Her social position and her money made her impervious to anyone's opinion and she did exactly as she pleased. Still, he mused fondly, as mad as she was at times, he loved her. She enchanted and captivated him. He wanted to marry her more than he had ever wanted to do anything in his life.

And so he swallowed his toast and said nothing.

"Bull In A China Shop!"

"THORN!" Lyn said the first moment they were alone. "our crowd is throwing the annual spring dance at the club tomorrow night. Remember? Nola is planning on you two going with Geoff and me."

"That should be nice," he offered absently. "Say, do you suppose Nola is really gone to that farmer chap?"

"How should I know? Listen—I want you to make Bob invite Talbot Mack to that dance tomorrow night."

"What is this?" he protested. "Are you crazy, too? First, you can't stand the sight of him, and now you want him at the dance?"

"I know what I'm doing. Nola has the idea that dear Tally is being persecuted and she's decided to champion him. If she does our lives will be miserable for the next few months. We must stop it now. Has many ideas penetrated that dense skull of yours, dear brother, or must I draw a diagram?"

"You mean—let her see him against the background of our society crowd? He'd be a bull in a china shop!"

"Exactly."

Late that afternoon when Bob hesitatingly broached the subject of the dance to Tally, that young man said almost the same thing.

"So they want to show me up in front of their friends, eh? Nola must have been boosting me. They want her to see what a dull clod I am."

"I'm ashamed of them," Bob said with sincerity. "I would have refused to ask you if I hadn't had a remarkable inspiration."

When he finished revealing his inspiration Tally was chuckling. "With a queer amusement. 'Okay, Bob,' he agreed. 'Nola says I've lost my sense of humor. Maybe this inspiration of yours will restore it!'"

The cool April evening was clear and star-spangled. The open windows in the immense ballroom of the Dunes Country Club looked out on a serene expanse of dark ocean. The air was salty and brisk and stimulating. A young spring moon rode high.

The orchestra from the Baltimore Hotel in town was playing a smooth swing rhythm when Thorn's sedan parked near the first tee of the golf course and helped Nola and Jocelyn out. A figure detached itself from a group on the veranda and came toward them.

"Have you been waiting long, Geoff?" Thorn greeted.

"About ten minutes. Sorry I couldn't join you for dinner, Lyn. One of the new ponies was sick and I had the vet over. He's still there. I may have to take a run over to my place later on—you won't mind, will you, Lyn?"

"Why should I mind?" she replied. "I'm quite accustomed to being neglected for horses, Geoff."

"That isn't fair, Lyn," he protested, taking one of her hands in both of his. "You know how much this match with Cloverbrook means to the club."

Jocelyn smiled up into his face. "I was only joking, Geoff. I want the Dunes team to win as much as you do."

"We all want you to win," Nola asserted. "I hope your dancing has improved since the last time I was out here."

Continued tomorrow.

In a badly-lit cafe, seafaring men smoked and drank their rum. Suddenly a huge man burst through the doors.

"Is there anyone here called Pederson?" he roared.

No one spoke. A few customers began to edge their way uneasily toward the door.

"Is there anyone here called Pederson?" he demanded again.

A very small, timid man rose from a table in one corner and said: "Yes, my name is Pederson. Who wants me?"

"Oh, so you're Pederson, are you?" growled the man-mountain. "I've a debt to settle with you."

He strode across the room, picked up the little man with one hand and battered him senseless with the other. He then dropped him on the floor and left the cafe.

Twenty minutes later the little man recovered consciousness and got up painfully, smiling and feeling said aloud: "I thought I could fool him. My name's not Pederson."

Millionaire (speaking to body of students)—All my success, all my tremendous wealth and financial prestige, I owe to one thing alone, pluck, pluck, pluck!

Student—But how are we to find the right people to pluck?

Mr. Dubb (doubtfully)—Well now, I'm not sure. What's the name of the other leg?

It is not the groundless gossip about us which causes the worry.

Friend—How is your insomnia?

Springtime

Let's all have fun this Spring—forget worry, care, time, forget everything and enjoy this lovely season. Get out in the open, relax, go on shopping expeditions, stroll leisurely around. It's Spring! Time for a new hat, for a new coat — for baseball, birds — time for Spring fun!

Spring Thoughts

Spring is such a splendid Season
That Everyone likes
for various reasons

Some like the air
—so warm, so soft,
Some like the sky
so lovely aloft

And some proclaim
that for Nature's best,
her budding flowers
eclipse the rest

Still others admire
the drops of dew
That glisten brightly
when day is new

But as for me,
I like every thing
Each has its place
in the scheme of Spring

All blend together
wonderfully right—
A "super-production"
of sound and sight

It's the masterpiece
of God's creating—
Spring, to me
gets highest rating
